Sillin Supporting Area Compact Plan

Central Hudson President Lelan F. Sillin Jr. said today that the residents of the Mid-Hudson Valley should be given the opportunity to plan and carry out a balanced program for the future of the region.

He said that the Federal Government has an excellent opportunity to participate in decisions affecting the future of the Hudson River Valley region by joinin gthe states of New York and New Jersey in creating the Interstate Compact Commission provided for in New York State law.

Sends Letter

Sillin's opinion was contained in a letter to Congressman Wayne N. Aspinall, chairman of the Houte Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, whose subcommittee heard testimony Friday on legislation dealing with the future development of the Hudson River Valley.

In his statement, Sillin said "I support both President Johnson and Governor Rockefeller in their efforts to create a more beautiful nation and state, and I want to be identified with those who are concerned with rebuilding our older cities, cleaning up the Hudson River, developing additional parks and areas for recreation, and with those who seek to develop the countryside in a manner which would preserve its scenic values."

"It is my belief, however, that the key to the future development of the natural and human resources of this region will depend upon our being successful in following a balanced program. That is, one which will provide for both the preservation and enhancement of the scenic and historic values of the region and its progressive and essential economic, cultural and educational development. The state legislation clearly charges the commission to pursue these joint objectives."

"The challenge that is presented not only here in the Hudson Valley but across the nation is whether the American people can secure the benefits of an improved environment and at the same time maintain a healthy, viable economy that will assure an ever-improving standard of living for people. The present focus of attention on the Hudson Valley offers a great opportunity to demonstrate the ability of people to reconcile these demands."

"I believe that state and local governments and the people of the region together with the federal participation envisioned in the state legislation can meet this challenge. The new State law establishing the Hudson River Valley Commission and (Continued on Page 5, Col. 1)

Hits Rocky Over Bill On Hudson

Terms Governor Word Inaccurate

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's criticism of a bill to develop and improve the Hudson River Valley is "intemperate and deliberately inaccurate," says the congressman who drafted the legislation.

Rep. Richard T. Ottinger, a Democrat from Pleasantville, N.Y., made that observation Friday at the conclusion of a House Interior subcommittee's hearing on the proposed Hudson River development plan.

Says Charges False

Ottinger added that Rockefeller "knows that his charges were false. He knows that my bill provides for the very action called for by his own Hudson River Valley Commission. . ."

Ottinger's bill, when pending amendments are made, would create a New York-New Jersey federal compact to plan and carry out a program to improve and expand the river valley area's scenic, recreational and histrocial resources.

In addition, the bill would express the sense of Congress that federal agencies should refrain from building or approving any projects inconsistent with the purpose of the bill while the compact was being drawn.

Rockefeller, in a statement submitted to the hearing, said Ottinger's amended bill "would do absolutely nothing of substance." The Republican governor also said that if the bill were approved, it would "create confusion and delay" in improving the Hudson River region.

Another Proposes

In addition to the Ottinger bill, another was proposed by Rep. John G. Dow, a Democrat from Grand View, N.Y. Dow's measure would provide for a study of steps to be undertaken to improve the valley.

His measure found support from the Consolidated Edison Co., which has been involved in controversy over its proposal to build a hydro-electric plant at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson.

Delay Decision On A-Plant Once Sought for Area

Although the Catskill Mountain area earlier this year lost out on one of the great industrial prizes of the century — a $375-million atom smasher—competition continues to sharpen in the race for site location of the project.

For several months, a Hunter Mountain tract in Greene County had been considered very much in the running, but was eliminated as a possibility in the spring, due to several reasons—including lack of a large metropolitan airport nearby, inadequate electrical facilities and the fact that no major college existed in the area for laboratory and research collaboration.

Despite the fact that local politicians exerted efforts to secure the atom plant for this area in an attempt to bring thousands of workers and their spending power to the Catskills, the Atomic Energy Commission failed to name the Greene County site when it pared down dozens of contenders to a final half dozen possibilities. With areas still in the running champing at the bit to acquire the prize, the decision on the winning location may not come until after the November election, according to the Associated Press.

At issue is which of six sites in six states will get the huge atomic particle accelerator, the costliest single scientific installation ever built.

The atom smasher, designed to explore fundamental secrets of matter for peaceful purposes, would be shaped like a race track nearly a mile in diameter.

Seek Computer Specialist for $25,000 Robbery

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)—Police, armed with a federal arrest warrant, searched today for a 34-year-old co puter specialist in connection with the $25,000 robbery Friday of two women tellers in a suburban Pittsford parking lot.

The warrant, issued by the FBI Friday night, charges Werner Schenk of nearby Irondequoit of violating the federal bank robbery law.

Police said Schenk fits the description of the well-dressed, deeply tanned gunman given them by the tellers, Miss Sharon Connellan and Mrs. Robert Stenzel.

Schenk was employed at the Xerox Corp. in Webster at an annual salary, a company spokesman said, "well in excess of $12,000." He last was seen, police said, when he left a staff meeting after the time of the robbery.

Kuhar Named by Vols, Schedule Parade at 4

A member of Pioneer Engine Company, Ellenville was named president of Ulster County Volunteer Firemen's Association Friday and two senior officers were reelected to 24th and 22nd terms at the annual meeting of the vols at Moose Lodge, here.

Robert Kuhar of Ellenville moved up from first vice president to the top post and will succeed Rodney DuBois of Wiltwyck Hose Company, who served as president last year.

Ellenville Next

In firemanic tradition next years' convention will be held in the hometown of the new president, Ellenville.

This year's parade, the final event of the three-day vols convention, will start from Broadway and McEntee Street at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Fred C. Harder, long-time president of Weiner Hose Company No. 6 was reelected to a 24th term as secretary, and Henry DuBois, mayor of New Paltz and a member of New Paltz Fire Department, was named to a 22nd term as treasurer.

Alvin Beatty of New Paltz Fire Department moved up one step to first vice president, and Orville M. Klomps of Ulster Hose Company was elected second vice president.

Morton Finch of Kingston was reelected a director for a five-year term. He has been serving as chairman of the board .

Beatty and Lawson Upright, chief of Gardiner Fire Department, were named to the Legislative Committee.

Backs Control Center

Winfred Snyder, Ulster County fire coordinator, filed his annual report and spoke on the proposed fire control center. He urged all members to contact their supervisors for support of the project.

William Dederick, chairman of the vols parade today, outlined the method of judging equipment and marchers. He said all equipment would be judged at 3 p. m.

Two new members were accepted, William Van Voorhis and Stephen DeMare, both of Highland Hose Company.

The past president's badge was presented to DuBois by Chairman of the Board Finch, a member of A. H. Wicks Engine and Truck Co.

Parade Favored With Sunny Skies

It should be a great day for the Ulster County Volunteer Firemen's Association — that group of dedicated public servants planning the biggest convention parade in its history this afternoon.

On the heels of a chilly night that saw temperatures dip into the 40s and 50s, firemen and spectators planning to view the parade in Kingston today at 4 o'clock awoke to clear, sunny weekend skies.

According to the Associated Press, the Weather Bureau forecast generally perfect weather across New York State for today and Sunday. By the time the six divisions in today's big parade (Continued on Page 5, Col. 3)

Workers to Vote Monday On Tentative Agreement Gained in Airline Strike

By NEIL GILBRIDE

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson quickly wooed negotiators to a tentative airline strike settlement, but there are signs of deep concern today whether the 35,000 striking mechanics will approve it.

Negotiators worked feverishly to wrap up the proposed contract for a vote by the strikers Sunday that will determine how fast the five struck bound airlines get their planes back in the air.

Not Inflationary

"This settlement will not be inflationary," Johnson said announcing the agreement in a nationwide television-r a d i o broadcast barely 12 hours after calling negotiators in the 23-day strike to the White House.

His comment reflected the touchy question of the agreement's economic impact, but the government's biggest worry at the moment was to win the ratification vote.

Details of the agreement were a tightly guarded secret and comments from both union and management appeared directed primarily at ending the strike.

"We feel sure it will be ratified by our membership," said President P.L. (Roy) Siemiller of the striking AFL-CIO International Association of Machinists.

Is Pleased

Chief negotiator William J. Curtin for United, Eastern, Northwest, National and Trans World Airlines expressed pleasure at the settlement of the "difficult and prolonged" strike.

But no planes can fly until the proposal is accepted by the union members who have thrown contract agreements back in the teeth of their leaders in the past.

Based on the last reported union demand and airlines' offer, the contract seemed almost certain to provide wage increases of about 4 per cent annually over a three-year period.

While this is in excess of Johnson's yardstick limiting average wage increases to 3.2 per cent a year, the President noted his guideline policy left room for bigger hikes in special circumstances.

"The fact that productivity has advanced so rapidly in the airline industry means, according to all participants in the settlement, that this settlement will not be inflationary," Johnson said.

Hedge Against Claims

Some observers saw this as a hedge against later claims that the union had won its economic argument that workers deserve a fatter share of airlines profits.

"This settlement will not contribute to any increase in prices," Johnson said.

Before the settlement, the union had demanded wage increases up to 53 cents an hour over 36 months for top mechanics who now earn $3.52 per hour.

The airlines' last reported money offer was roughly 50 cents an hour over 42 months.

The stalemate before Johnson's intervention stemmed in large part from the airlines' insistence in hewing to the White House guidelines.

Curtin's settlement announcement was notable for skipping any mention of economic impact.

Siemiller's endorsement of the announced pact appeared soberly thoughtful. He had earlier told the Senate Labor Committee, considering emergency legislation to halt the strike, that his highly democratic union (Continued on Page 5, Col. 5)

Probe U2 Jet Crash In Bolivia

Speculate Pilot Was Unconscious

ORURO, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivian and U.S. officials probed the wreckage of a plane in the hills of western Bolivia today for clinching evidence it was an American U2 reconnaissance jet that strayed more than 3,000 miles from Florida with its pilot apparently unconscious.

Officials said there was little doubt it was the missing plane.

The jet plunged to earth Thursday afternoon, apparently from a great height. Wreckage was strewn over a wide area. The pilot's body was found, badly battered by the crash.

Officials said farmers who found the wreckage west of this city near the Bolivian border with Peru and Chile and 140 miles south of La Paz turned in papers identifying the pilot as Capt. Robert D. Hickman, 32, of Alexandria, La.

The U.S. Defense Department had identified Hickman Thursday as the man at the controls of the high-flying U2 that failed to follow its intended course off the coast of Florida and flew on straight south.

The plane took off Thursday morning on what a spokesman said was a routine mission from Barksdale Air Force Base, Louisiana.

14 Are Reported Injured In Area Traffic Mishaps

Fourteen persons were injured and two motorist were cited by State Police as the result of traffic accidents that occurred in the area Friday and early today. Seven persons were hurt, two seriously in a Dutchess County mishap involving a car and a truck.

Seven persons were injured, two seriously, as the result of a car-truck collision which occurred at 1:30 a. m. today on Route 199 at the intersection of Milan Hollow Road, Red Hook.

The truck driver was cited by State Trooper Francis Petraglia for failure to yield the right of way.

Trooper Petraglia said Theodore Parisella, 18, of 12 Princeton Street, Red Hook, was driving west on Route 199 and John McIntosh, 61, of Rhinebeck, was driving a truck south on Milan Hollow Road when he allegedly failed to yield the right of way and the vehicles collided at the intersection.

Legal Move Stalls Rally in Baltimore

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Legal action has stalled racist rallies in Baltimore, but a white supremacist warns, "You'll be seeing more and hearing more of us."

Negro and white youths threw bottles, rocks and metal pipes at each other in a 20-minute battle Friday night on North Castle Street, a predominantly Negro section of East Baltimore.

Started as Fracas

What apparently started as a small fracas among four youths turned into a larger skirmish when about 20 white youths charged into the area.

A 33-year-old man and a 41-year-old woman received minor cuts and were treated at a hospital. Police reported one arrest.

Meanwhile, city police turned out in force to insure that an injunction against the National States Rights Party forbidding rallies would be obeyed. There was no rally.

Officials of the organization had indicated earlier they would abide by the injunction, issued Friday.

Five persons were charged with rioting after white youths roamed through Negro neighborhoods Thursday night following an anti-Negro rally by the party — the third such rally in four nights.

Warns of More

The warning that more would be heard from the party came from Connie Lynch, an itinerant preacher who was one of the five persons charged with rioting in presentments returned by the Baltimore grand jury.

Airlines Strike End Causes Rush For Reservations

NEW YORK (AP) — President Johnson hadn't finished announcing settlement of the airlines strike on radio and television when callers began to telephone reservation offices.

The President was still talking to the nation when the switchboard in the Trans World Airlines office in Philadelphia began lighting up.

"It was like a Christmas tree," said reservations supervisor Mike Kurm. "We'll be adding additional clerks over the weekend to handle the rush."

Situation Was Chaotic

"I heard the announcement on the radio and within minutes we were swamped," said Carl Haas, who heads TWA's reservations department in San Francisco.

Bill Feree, a spokesman for United Air Lines in Los Angeles, said the situation in his office was chaotic.

"People seem confused," he added, "but everybody's pretty happy."

In New York, United reported it had been overwhelmed by the number of callers and ticket-seekers lined up at reservation counters in the city's West Side Terminal looking for places on early flights.

Thant Convinced: Must Curb Trend To Expanded War

MOSCOW (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General U Thant said today after his talks with Soviet leaders that he is "increasingly convinced that the Viet Nam war will develop into a major war if the present trend continues."

The war could "spill over the frontiers," Thant told a news conference at Moscow Airport as he wound up his visit and headed back to New York.

Thant declined to say whether he meant it would involve the United States and the Soviet Union in direct conflict.

Thant indicated that the Soviet attitude toward the Viet Nam conflict did not change during his visit, which began last Monday. He talked with General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev of the Soviet Communist party, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and other officials.

"The Soviet attitude toward Viet Nam is well known," Thant said. "I don't think I should try to interpret this."

LBJ Is Gratified With Wilson Plan To Ease Problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson is described as pleased with Prime Minister Harold Wilson's efforts to cure Britain's economic woes without abandoning her world roles in defense and financial affairs.

Administration sources said Johnson was favorably impressed with Wilson's new austerity measures, regarding them as realistic steps facing up to Britain's balance of payments difficulties.

Will Stay as Power

The President was reported assured that Britain does not intend to pull out as a military power in the Southeast Asia area.

Wilson headed back to London via Ottawa Friday night after a wide-ranging one-day round of talks with Johnson. It was the fourth in what have become twice-a-year trips to Washington by the British leader, and both U.S. and British spokesmen portrayed the parlay as promoting personal understanding by the government heads.

Did Not Seek Money

Both sides agreed that Wilson did not gain financial aid on this trip. Wilson was said to have enlisted Johnson's understanding and sympathy for the British economic difficulty, which Wilson hoped to solve primarily through self-help measures.

Wilson's government has proposed that w a g e s, salaries, prices and dividends be frozen for at least six months in an austerity program to save the pound sterling.

Advocates Stern Policy

Note State Agency Pleased at Progress Made By Ulster Recreation Youth Project

A representative of the New York State Division for Youth is reportedly "very well pleased" at the progress being made through the work of area students on the 68-acre beautification tract along the Hudson River in the Town of Ulster.

The State representative, Donald Howard, who visited the tract this week told Town of Ulster Supervisor Thaddeus Musialkiewicz that he thought the area would develop into a "fine park development."

Work on the tract, which is supposed to become a Town recreation center, began July 1 under the auspices of the Youth Division. Division director is Sidney Lutzin, a former superintendent of recreation in Kingston.

Ten youths who needed summer jobs were hired to establish a picnic area, clean the waterfront and cut and clear the brush from the area during an eight-week period.

The program, which is part of the New York State Home Town Beautification Plan, is being financed by State funds, at no cost to the Town of Ulster. The Town purchased the tract of land some time ago. It is off the Ulster Landing Road south of the Kingston - Rhinecliffe Bridge.

The youths working on the project receive the state's minimum wage for a 35-hour working week. The youths include David Jackson and Joseph Ferrendino, East Kingston; Louis Bruneau, Dennis Wilson, Lawrence Scanlon, Charles Richers, Peter Watzka, Charles Lay and Richard Sande, Town of Ulster; David Jackson, East Kingston and John Carey, Port Ewen.

Town of Ulster Park Commissioners in charge of planning for future development are Nick Valenzano, chairman; Joseph Benjamin, Joseph Senor, William Reilly and Joseph De Fino.

Supervisor Musialkiewitz said that he hopes by the end of August "access to the property will be available."

B52's Hit Demilitarized Zone To Halt North's Infiltration

SAIGON (AP) — Striking to combat North Vietnamese infiltration, B52 jets bombed targets today in the demilitarized zone at the 17th Parallel that is supposed to be free of armed forces activity under the Geneva agreement of 1954.

It was the first such ordered American response there to the Communist flow southward.

"From the amount of fire we received," a spokesman said, "the positions evidently were occupied."

The spokesman said the eight-engine Stratofortresses f r o m Guam hit an enemy ammunition dump, a weapons storage area, 26 known gun positions and extensive fortifications in the southern half of the six-mile-wide zone, which blankets the border between North and South Viet Nam.

U. S. fighter-bombers twice loosed explosives over the zone last September in strikes that were officially described at the time as accidental and "clearly a departure from the rules."

Bombing of a Ben Hai River bridge by night killed three persons on North Viet Nam's side. Later the South Vietnamese hamlet of Gia Linh was hit and seven persons were reported killed.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

FAITH IN JAPAN—III

Dr. William P. Woodard's faith has helped give many a greater insight into Christianity in Japan and also into Japanese religions and culture.

Dr. Woodard went to Japan in 1921 as a missionary for The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions which is now The United Church Board for World Ministry. During World War II, he resigned from the American Board and served with U. S. Naval Intelligence. Afterwards he served with the occupation government in Japan as an advisor.

A conversation with two representatives of the Buddhist Federation in Japan led him to help found, in 1954, and become the director of The International Institute for the Study of Religions. Its purpose is to help foreign scholars, religious leaders and others gain a better understanding of the religions of Japan. It is an independent non-profit nonsectarian Japanese foundation. It also helps Japanese scholars and religious leaders study religions outside their country.

His belief in interfaith cooperation has led him to the conclusion that "it is time for another World Council of Religions." Dr. Woodard and the Institute is a step in the right direction toward world understanding and world peace.

Paltz Schedules . Visitors Week August 7 Through 14

More people than New Paltz has ever seen will be storming the southern Ulster community next week after Chamber of Commerce President S. Parks Glen cuts the village ribbon to inaugurate Visitors Week 1966 from Aug. 7 through 14.

Glen expects several thousand person to pass in and out of New Paltz during the week of festivities, which will be held in conjunction with the annual Aug. 6 Stone House Day.

In addition to the Chamber and other local organizations, the week is under the direction of the State University of New York College at New Paltz and the New Paltz Historical Society.

Plan 30 Events

A program listing some 30 events and activities for the week has been published and distributed throughout the state, and additional copies will be sent to interested persons who may direct their inquiries to New Paltz Chamber of Commerce. To handle the numerous inquiries from the huge influx of visitors who are anticipated during the week, the Chamber has provided an information booth on Route 299 a short distance from Exit 18 of the New York State Thruway.

Included among these varied activities are tours of historical sites, art exhibitions, theatre productions, planetarium showings, recreational activities, and lectures about the history of the area. The two internationally-famous resorts, Lake Mohonk and Lake Mimmewaska, will be open to visitors, and a number of other places of interest also will be open to the public during the week.

Culminating this week of events will be an Old Fashioned Community Sing scheduled for Sunday, Aug. 14, on the High School Athletic Field beginning at 7:30 p. m.

Among the visitors will be many of the parents of the more than 900 freshmen who will enter the State University College at New Patlz this fall. The Chamber of Commerce has sent special invitations to these parents, and the responses indicate that many of them will take advantage of the opportunity to visit the area.

Outlines Reasons

Chairman of "Visitors Week 1966" is Mrs. Richard Culver, vice-president of New Paltz Chamber of Commerce, with Mrs. Jesse Bickmore as co-chairman, who pointed out some of the reasons for providing a special week for visitors:

"Because of the many inquiries received by the Chamber each year from persons interested in visiting the New Paltz area," Mrs. Culver said, "many of us in New Paltz saw the need for such a special week. The annual Stone House Day in New Paltz has attracted many visitors here each August for years, and it seemed logical to follow that day with several more days of planned events.

"When we began listing the possible events and activities," Mrs. Culver explained, "we quickly concluded that it would take a full week to schedule all of them. With the cooperation of other individuals and organizations in the community it didn't take long to fill out an activity-packed program."

Chamber President Glenn commented "New Paltz has a lot to offer the summer visitor. Its picturesque setting at the foot of the mountains make it an excellent vacation spot, and its outstanding transportation facilities from nearby New York City via the New York State Thruway, make it easily accessible to visitors.

"Add to this the historical, educational and cultural offerings in the community, and you have an ideal place for a one-day trip, a week or two of activities for the entire family, or a place to spend the entire summer. With all of this going for us, Visitors Week 1966 is bound to be a success and I predict it will become an annual affair."

VIEW FROM TOP—Looking down from only one of the breath-taking vantage points at scenic Lake Minnewaska is a group of young art students. Visitors Week offers an unusual opportunity to visit this world-famous mountain resort.

ON OLDEST STREET—Lacemaking is an old art which will be demonstrated as part of the Oldest Street lecture-tour, one of the features of Visitors Week. Mr. William Heidgerd, lacemaker, is shown here in period costume. (A. E. Woolley photos).

FOR THE KIDDIES—A real narrow-guage steam and train ride, including a stop for water at the water tower, offers children of all ages an authentic glimpse into our historic past. Fascinating museum and collections relating to trains add to the enjoyment at Wallkill Valley Railroad.

WOODSTOCK NEWS

No Change Made For Fire Alarm Phone Number

Some confusion has resulted from a matter which has been given much publicity in this column recently.

In announcing the installation of a new Plectron fire alarm system, now in effect in Woodstock, a typographical error inadvertently changed the telephone number to be used by residents wishing to report a fire or emergency. The first article on the subject, published Friday, July 22, listed the correct number to call in order to contact those in charge of the dispatch system. A subsequent article on Monday, July 25, gave the number incorrectly by one digit.

The fire number in Woodstock is, as it has long been: ORiole nine—two-zero-one-two. In other words, the number currently listed in the local telephone directory is still correct and should be used at all times.

If the air has been cleared on the fire alarm telephone number, it still remains heavy with charges and counter charges as to who should receive credit for the new Plectron system itself. Speaking for the Woodstock Town Board this week, Supervisor William R. West Jr. said the board had felt a request made by local volunteer firemen to have the board share the cost of a 24-hour paid dispatcher in the amount of some $9,000 to handle both fire and police calls, would not be a prudent move at this time. Reason for this, felt the board, was the fact that police calls would be handled in the near future through the installation of new radios that would shortly provide a hookup between the local police car, a bay station in the Town Hall annex constabulary office and a remote in the Town Clerk's office. Since this, too, would be a new system, the board felt nothing would be gained through a fire-police tie-in at this point.

Has Own Authority

West said further that the board never involves itself in fire department affairs; that this department has authority to make its own decisions and raise and spend its own money. He also indicated that he had not been aware that there was any dissatisfaction whatsoever on the part of local firemen concerning the board's decision on the Plectron system.

Fire Commissioner Joseph Raymond, speaking for the Board of Fire Commissioners this week, reiterated that his group is happy with the new system, which does not tie-in the police; said the Town Board had not closed the door on such an eventual tie-in for all time. He said the board had shown itself willing to reconsider the entire matter again, either next year or later, when the town budget is drawn up. Referring to a "closed" meeting between the Town Board and the Board of Fire Commissioners, to which line officers of the fire department were not invited; Raymond said the Town Board had simply sent for the Fire Commissioners and they, in turn, immediately reported the results (that the Town Board had decided it did not want to tie in the police department with the Plectron dispatch system) the same evening.

Although some line officers and individual firemen of the fire department have made succinctly irritated statements about the entire affair in private conservations, none seems willing to see these remarks quoted publicly.

Matter of Economics

If any blame should ever be placed on either agency involved, it would seemingly have to fall in an economic category. Until the Town Board has released financial figures to show the total cost of the new radio system in the police department—and until the fire department has given a breakdown of the cost of all Plectron units involved and salaries being paid for their operation — no comparisons can be made to ascertain which system might be the best for Woodstock as far as service rendered and costs are concerned. And until these new costs are compared with monies spent for past operations which have been discontinued, the public will remain in the dark on why the whole alarm controversy started in the first place. Most observers, based on past experience, have little hope of this ever happening.

Carried More, Made Less

UTICA, N.Y. (AP)—Mohawk Airlines carried more passengers but reaped less profit in the first six months of 1966 compared to the corresponding period last year, says the regional carrier's president.

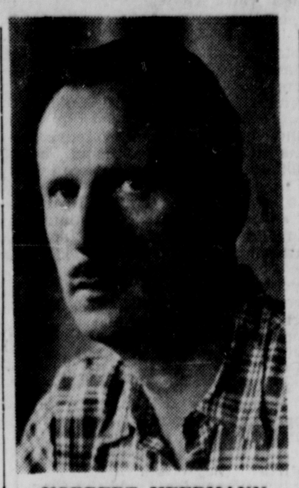

Robert E. Peach reported Friday that net profit from January to June this year showed a decrease of $895,380.

In addition, Peach said, per-share earnings were 18.8 cents, compared with 70.7 cents for the first six months of last year.

The six-month profit loss was a result of a $404,295 subsidy decrease and a $250,000 setback during the heavy snowstorm in late January and early February, he said.

The first-half passenger total of 959,275 this year represents a 22 - per cent increase, Peach said.

Operating revenue increased by 22.2 per cent to $19,762,799, while operating expenses climbed to $18,583,618, a 28.6 per jump.

NORBERT HEERMANN

Heermann Exhibit Of Local Photos Opens in Albany

An exhibition of portrait photographs by Norbert Heermann of Woodstock will open at the Albany Institute of History and Art Aug. 9 and continue through Aug. 31.

Heermann discovered some 10 years ago that a lifelong career as a portrait painter was an invaluable asset in the field of portrait photography. He began with two basic principles which he has adhered to: no artificial light and the simplest equipment. He felt his old-style Kodak Reflex was adequate because of its excellent lens. Recognition of Heermann's work was immediate by the critics he valued most — the Woodstock painters.

Since then these powerful portraits have often been seen in Woodstock and, last fall, in a large exhibition at the University of Cincinnati, which drew close to 1,000 visitors a day. Beaumont Newhall, director of Eastman House in Rochester, has also seen some of the photographs and will select a group for exhibition there.

While there are some famous sitters included in the upcoming Albany show—Dr. John Enders Nobel Prize winner; the late Thomas W. Costain, author; Joan Fontaine, actress—most of the portraits in the exhibit will be of Heermann's Woodstock colleagues.

It'll Cost More To Eat the Same In OCS Cafeteria

A review of the financial status of the Onteora school lunch program at the July Board of Education meeting resulted in a resolution by the Board to increase the cost of school lunches for the 1966-67 school year. Prices of regular lunches for students were increased from 25c to 30c. Some a la carte items at the high school were increased but prices for milk and ice cream remained the same. Adult lunches were raised in price from 35c to 40c.

The price of school lunches has remained stable since the cafeterias first began operation in 1952 and the Board says it was reluctant to make a change; however, the following factors forced them to yield to the steadily increasing cost of operation, members said.

It is the intent of the Board to make the school lunch program self-supporting and no burden on local taxpayers.

An estimated loss of $13,000 was anticipated for 1966-67 unless the price for school lunches was increased.

Free Federal surplus food has decreased in the past few years. About $4,000 less in surplus food is expected during 1966-67. This reduction in surplus food available to the Federal Government for allocation to schools will require more money for local purchase of food.

Increasing costs of operation have gradually reduced the annual balance in the cafeteria fund.

Some cafeteria costs which at one time were borne by the general fund have gradually been assigned to the cafeteria since 1961-62 in an effort to make the cafeterias self-supportingg.

The Board action to increase school lunch prices brings Onteora in line with most County schools, it is said. A survey of school lunch prices for 1965-66 in the public schools of the County showed five schools charging 30c and two schools including Onteora, charging 25c, the Board maintains.

The Onteora district operates five cafeterias, one in each school building, and served a total of 291,398 Class A lunches during the 1965-66 school year. A Federal subsidy of 9c per lunch enables schools to serve what is thought to be nutritious meals to students at a modest cost. In addition, a 4c per extra half pint of milk Federal subsidy permits the sale of this extra milk to students for 2c.

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, JULY 30, 1966

DRAFT OFF DEAD CENTER

One of the most telling criticisms of the Selective Service system is that it cuts most heavily into the ranks of the poor and uneducated. The draft unfairly takes a higher proportion of these youths than of those in better circumstances who are eligible for occupational or educational deferments.

Numerous other faults have been found with the present method of supplying military manpower. Few of them were satisfactory dealt with by Selective Service Director Hershey in his appearance before the House Armed Services Committee, or by the long awaited Pentagon report on the subject. Indeed, Thomas Morris, assistant secretary of defense for manpower, testified that the department considers such matters as draft inequities "beyond our responsibility" because the military's sole interest in the draft is as a "user of manpower."

To sum up: General Hershey seems pretty well satisfied with things as they are, and the military seems little concerned about manpower procurement as long as the flow is uninterrupted. Thus it is evident that the impetus for reform must come from Congress and the White House in response to public concern.

Happily, the reform movement at last appears to be under way. Hard on the heels of questionings and disclosures at the House committee hearings, President Johnson named a commission to study the whole matter and report back by January. It may be true, as some of the lawmakers grumble, that the President should let Congress have the ball instead of running with it himself. But at least the push for draft reform is off dead center. When the commission makes its recommendations, Congress ought to be in a mood to act with dispatch.

HOT ADVENTURE

Jean Pierre Marquant, who set out to hike through Death Valley "to prove to Europeans that adventure still exists in the United States," had already proved something before he started off. He had proved that President DeDaulle is not the only Frenchman with a taste for going his own way despite contrary opinion.

This can be an admirable characteristic. It can also lead to foolhardy enterprises. Trudging through one of the world's hot test spots in midsummer, in imminent danger of an inglorious death by dehydration, seems to qualify as such.

Despite reservations about the wisdom of this epic march, however, we must admit that it does fit the definition of adventure. It is, surely "the encountering of danger;" it is without doubt "an exciting and dangerous undertaking." But is this the only way to "prove that adventure still exists in the United States"? One wonders if M. Marquant has ever tried crossing an American city street at rush hour.

Russia withdraws its athletes from competition here in protest against the Viet Nam war. Maybe Moscow hopes we'll withdraw our troops in counter-protest.

NEW MEDICAL PROBE

When agencies of the government start probing various aspects of the medical profession's conduct, they have an obligation to try to do so without undermining legitimate public confidence in the profession. The danger is that, in exposing practices which take advantages of patients or are not in keeping with medical ethics, investigators may tar all doctors with a brush that should be applied only to some.

Having noted this obligation, and urged investigators to bear it in mind, one can also say that a congressional committee's forthcoming look at certain medical practices will be a healthy thing. There have been recurrent stories of doctors profiting by ownership in drug companies and other businesses they encourage patients to use. It would be good, not only for the public but also for the profession, if Senator Hart's Antitrust and Monopoly subcommittee could get to the bottom of this.

The Michigan senator has introduced legislation making it illegal for a doctor to profit from drugs or other items he prescribes for his patients. In this connection it is noteworthy that the American Medical Association has recognized the problem although it has not cracked down with anything stronger than admonition. Hart cites various practices that seem to argue for his proposed law.

In a sense, the Senate subcommittee will be following up on the Justice Department's suit charging the nation's organized pathologists with rigging prices for laboratory services and trying to drive others out of the laboratory business. The medical profession cannot take exception to this, so long as Senator Hart and his colleagues take pains to separate the sheep from the goats.

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Quick lunches in Paris and Pepsi-Cola in Communist Yugoslavia—who said United States prestige is declining?

American supermarkets, snack bars and cafeterias have long been a prominent feature of life in Paris In many cases, alas, they replaced famous restaurants cherished by generations of tourists.

But who ever heard of a self-respecting Parisian eating his lunch in 45 minutes instead of three hours?

Well, believe it or not, some 35,000 French civil servants now eat their lunch in 45 minutes so that with the time saved they can enjoy, of all things, a longer, American-style "le weekend."

This is only an experiment, to be sure. According to Minister Louis Joxe it involves, so far, employes of the French ministries, the town halls of Paris' 20 districts and police headquarters.

But it is a historic experiment nevertheless.

I remember vividly the furor caused in Paris some years ago by the late Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt when she said, in an unguarded moment, that the French spent too much time eating and drinking wine at lunch.

France's intellectual elite was outraged. "Are the vulgar Americans trying to teach civilized Frenchmen how to live?" they cried.

"Down with Yankee subversion," said the Communist newspaper l'Humanite

Mrs. Roosevelt, who meant no harm, was genuinely distressed. "Good heavens, I should have kept my mouth shut," she told me after a stormy interview with French reporters.

However, time marches on and with it the insidious America influence. President De Gaulle's anti-Americanism, like his vision of France's grandeur, has but a dim future.

But if the news from Paris is historic, the influence of American capitalism in Yugoslavia is positively stunning. President Tito's staid newspaper Politika just printed a full-page advertisement that must have made Marx and Lennin turn in their graves.

"New in Yugoslavia!" the ad said "It is a pleasure and a real joy—Pepsi-Cola refreshes . . . From now on, you, too, can be a consumer of the excellent drink called Pepsi-Cola."

And not a word about slivovitz, Yugoslavia's traditional and famous alcoholic delight made of prunes.

But Pepsie-Cola is not the only capitalist pleasure that Yugoslavs and tourists who flock to the Dalmatian coast can now enjoy. If they are alert, they also may be able to admire—in the flesh, no less—such famous western movie stars as Frank Sinatra, Sophia Loren, Doris Day and Gene Kelley.

For these celebrities have been given land by the Communist government free of charge to build private villas along the Dalmatian coast.

In this case there were loud protests by die-hard Marxists. "Why should we allow the millionaire elite of this globe to push our people from our coast?" they asked indignantly.

They were answered by Tito's leading economic journal, Ekonomska Politika, which described the orthodox Marxist-Leninst grumblers as "ignorant people" who do not understand the facts of life. Said Ekonomska Politika:

"Suppose the town of Budva presents Sophia Loren with a piece of land. She will shed on Budva a part of her worldwide fame which, it is undeniable, has an astronomic price."

Hotels around la Loren's villa would almost overnight skyrocket in value. So would the beaches and shops. "Even private persons who live off tourism will profit," the journal said.

How capitailistic can Communists be? Liberal Reds in Yugoslavia have even come to the conclusion that one should not include Marxist-Leninist ideology on restaurant menus But their more conservative and orthodox comrades insist that slivovitz is still better and more proletarian than Pepsi-Cola.

Thus far, nobody has as yet suggested that the two be mixed.

But who said that American influence is declining?

Muscle Cell Running Wild Can Cause Real Problems

By WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.S.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Chief Complaint: Patient complained of pain and swelling on right side of palate and face of about four weeks duration and loose molar teeth in upper right jaw. About one week ago he thought he had double vision in right eye. Right side of nose felt "stuffed up." Had nose bleed four days ago. Mouth "tasted bad" and he thought he had bad breath.

Habits: Smokes two to three packs of cigarettes a day.

Dental exam: Patient was a 61-year-old, well-developed, well-nourished male who appeared to be somewhat younger than his stated age. He was apprehensive about his present condition, fearing that he "had something serious."

His mouth was in poor dental condition. Many teeth were missing and he was wearing ill-fitting upper and lower partial dentures. Remaining teeth were elongated, loose, stained dark brown and covered at the necks with dark, almost black, tartar. Gums were bluish-red in some areas and bled easily.

Palatal tissue was grayish white with tiny red spots, characteristic of many heavy smokers. On upper right side of palate there was a large swelling next to first and second molars. Next to first molar there was an opening that seemed to communicate with maviliary sinus. Dark-colored matter could be expressed from this opening. Right side of face was swollen and left eye was partly closed. Right side of nose was slightly swollen. A large mass could be easily demonstrated in right nostril.

Consultation with family physician led to biopsy of nasal obstruction and palatal swelling. Palatal area was negative. Nasal biopsy was interpreted as a type of muscle cell tumor. Some authorities think that this form of tumor is due to a "muscle cell that runs wild."

After complete physical exam, lab tests, X-rays and consultations with surgeon and X-ray therapist, it was decided to treat tumor mass with X-ray. Some regression of tumor was thus obtained. On further consultation of surgeon, X-ray therapist and dentist, it was agreed that surgical removal of remaining tumor was necessary.

This was done. Fortunately, the surgeon feels that "he got around the tumor." Patient withstood operation well and has made an excellent recovery. He has been fitted with a removable dental prosthesis which replaces missing teeth and jaw, and helps restore normal contours of face.

Prognosis: Good.

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Red China's Mao Tse-tung has outsmarted himself.

He has filled his schools with so much propaganda, so many agitation campaigns and "voluntary" labor projects and cut study time so sharply that he's not getting the number of experts he needs to make his economy work.

In science, engineering and other fields, he's heavily dependent on men trained abroad.

Yet even Mao's propaganda-saturated high schools and colleges have turned out considerable numbers of students and graduates who think for themselves, privately challenge his decisions and criticize his mistakes.

These disagreements are voiced only in secret or hidden in allegorical writing, to be sure.

But these criticisms are growing in intensity with the regime's economic, political and international bumbles.

The problem of individual thinking has become so great and so "dangerous" that Mao's aides have decided to make changes in the school system.

They can't load the schools with much more propaganda. So they've decided to tighten up even more on which young people are to be allowed to go on to high school and college.

Entrance examinations of the past—based in part on knowledge of school subjects—are to be eliminated. Red officials say these examinations placed too great an emphasis on individual achievement and encouraged the "bourgeois" idea of "making one's own way and achieving individual fame, wealth and position."

This picking of students according to their knowledge of school work, Mao's men have decided, keeps from high school and college many young men and women who aren't much at studying but who come from the right class and who have high party spirit.

The new system aims at restricting higher education to people who do not think as individuals.

By doing more to eliminate the thinkers, Mao hopes his colleges will no longer be centers of secret opposition to his regime.

But he is likely to discover that it is more difficult than he supposes to keep college young people from thinking.

Attemps to screen out the individualists are not new in Red China. For years, students have had to pass tests both in knowledge of their subjects and in political theory.

Regardless of the excellence of his subject knowledge, a student wasn't likely to go to high school or college if he did poorly in his political examinations or if his political record in daily life was mediocre.

Conversely, if a student was a political cell leader or the son of an official, he followed a relatively easy route to higher schooling.

This selection system was quite rigid. But Mao's men now find that it failed in keeping out thinkers.

Medicaid May Cost More Than Original Prediction

By TOM NOLAN
Washington Staff Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON (NEA)—Like any new-born baby, Medicare is causing some financial worries for its proud parents.

Chief among these is the fear that a little-known section of the program will cost far more than even the wildest original prediction. This section is Title 19, sometimes called Medicaid, and already Sen. John Williams, R-Del., is charging that the administration made a "multimillion-dollar blunder" in estimating its cost.

Many of the problems in Title 19 may never surface since House and Senate committees are currently debating whether Congress really intended to be so magnanimous with Medicaid.

What Title 19 provides essentially is matching federal money to states aiding "medical indigents" under 21 and over 65, as well as any adult in between who is blind, disabled or part of a family with dependent children.

It bears little resemblance to Medicare, since it is not tied to Social Security and, of course, is not limited to the elderly.

Title 19 leaves it up to the states to decide who is medically indigent. And that's the financial rub.

New York's state legislature had originally approved a plan which would allow a family of four to earn $6,000 a year and still be medically indigent. Some observers had estimated that more than a third of the state's 17 million people would have qualified for aid under this yardstick. The plan was recently amended, and now requires families with gross incomes of more than $2,500 to pay part of their bills.

So far, eight states have had Medicaid plans approved by the Health, Education and Welfare Department. Six others, including New York's are under HEW review.

Together, the eight approved plans estimate their needs in additional federal funds to be about $260 million for the first year. HEW originally estimated the government's share of Medicaid for the first year at $240 million.

Doing some mental arithmetic, Williams figures that if the 42 other states implement similar plans, Medicaid alone might cost taxpayers $1 billion annually.

Many federal sources concede that Williams may be close to the mark. "If the states decide that half of their people are 'sick poor'—and in some places perhaps they are—then Medicaid is going to cost a lot of money," says one.

Once the state legislature passes enabling legislation and the plan receives HEW approval, the program can start, financed mostly by federal money. Each state puts up a share proportionate to its per capita income: federal participation, it is said, will range from 55 to 83 per cent.

Financial worries are not the only fears nagging the administration. "Nobody knows what kind of programs Title 19 is capable of producing," complains one senator.

"It's more than likely some states will adopt programs which in effect will do nothing," adds an HEW official. In some states, Medicaid indeed might never be adopted.

This, of course, might lessen the government's financial burden, but it raises some prickly questions in another area: government regulation. With one level of treatment available to the medically needy in some states and no program in others, Congress would face heavy pressure to rectify the imbalance.

Whatever comes of these deliberations, some form of medical assistance for those who need it but cant' pay for it—regardless of age—seems to be here to stay. The health care concept and the medical profession will perhaps never be the same.

Nor, for that matter, may the U.S. Treasury.

End Tier Region Strike

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP)—Agreement on an unprecedented six-year-long contract has ended an eight-week-old strike that idled 2,000 workers and halted work on about $50 million worth of construction projects in the Southern Tier region.

A spokesman for Local 7 of the Laborers Union, AFL-CIO, announced that union members voted Thursday to accept the contract with the Associated Building Contractors.

The new pact, the first of its type in New York State among the building trades, provides for a wage increase of almost $1.50 an hour over the first five years. In 1971, the increase will be based on an average of the increase in effect in the Albany, Schenectady, Utuca, Syracuse and Rochester areas.

The contract expires May 31, 1972.

The strike, which began June 1, involved several unions and affected work in Broome, Tioga, Chenango and Delaware counties.

A 50-member bricklayers' union, which has not been picketing, is to vote on a proposal Tuesday.

Man Is Accused By Publisher of Assault, Robbery

NEW YORK (AP) — Leroi Jones, the Negro dramatist who headed Harlem's controversial Black Arts Theater, was arrested Friday night on charges he beat and robbed the publisher of a fledgling literary magazine.

Police said Jones, 31, was charged with punching and stealing $10 from Shephard Sherbell, 21, publisher of "The East Side Review."

According to detectives, Jones allegedly hit Sherbell while two of the playwright's friends held the publishers' arms outside the Village Theater at 6th Street and Second Avenue on Manhattan's Lower East Side.

Sherbell, who is white, told police Jones also took his wallet containing $10.

Jones, who lives in Newark, N.J. was accused of producing anti-white plays while he directed the now-defunct Black Arts Theater in Harlem. The theater was the recipient of federal grants.

Police said Jones claimed he had contributed a play to Sherbell's review and that the publisher owed him $100. Sherbell said he had been given the manuscript with the understanding that he would pay Jones for it when he had the money.

85 Once Competed

Originally, 85 proposed sites were in the running but the National Academy of Sciences narrowed the number to six. These six, now under consideration by the Atomic Energy Commission are:

Ann Arbor, Mich.; Brookhaven National Laboratory at Upton, N.Y.; Denver, Colo.; Madison, Wis.; Sierra foothills near Sacramento, Calif., and Weston, near Chicago.

AEC Chairman Glenn T. Seaborg says none of the six sites has been eliminated yet and that the decision will be made by the end of the year.

Other sources speculated today that, with the AEC engrossed in its annual budgetary problems — and with the political pressures being what they are — the decision hardly is expectable until after the election.

Plan Wednesday Meeting

Leaders of the New York congressional delegation meet Aug. 3 with Seaborg to plug for the Brookhaven site. The conferees are expected to include Democratic Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, Republican Sen. Jacob K. Javits and senior House members from the state.

Governors, Congress members and local booster organizations from other states have exercised their best selling techniques on the AEC, too.

One of the arguments being used by boosters for east or west coasts is this: there are two big centers of high energy physics research now, at Brookhaven and Livermore, Calif. If a third were set up far from the other two, the nation's efforts in this scientific field might be diffused and diluted, with harmful results.

But officials of midland states argue too much of the nation's research and development is concentrated now on Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

In the interests of fairness, a balanced economy, and overall scientific excellence, they say more thought should be given to such areas as the Midwest, the Rocky Mountain states and the South.

"In view of the emerging constructive and progressive plans of both state and local governments and private citizens directed to the economic development of the Hudson Valley while creating and presrving an environment of quality, we believe it is most important that these plans be fostered and encouraged and that these efforts not be retarded because of a federal-state controversy. The valley and the nation can best be served by giving the new governmental and private organizations every opportunity to accomplish their objectives. We also believe that such agencies are best suited to assure the success of a dynamic economy in an environment of natural beauty.

"Accordingly, I hope that the Subcommittee on National Parks and Recreation will recommend that the President appoint three members to the Hudson River Valley Commission so that the work of the commission can proceed with the full participation of the Federal government and that the Subcommittee will give encouragement to Mid-Hudson Pattern for Progress and the highly regarded and long established Regional Plan Association which is devoted to the coordinated development of the New Jersey - New York - Connecticut metropolitan region."

Baltimore, the scheduled rally site, while white residents of the neighborhood stood in clusters on corners and sat on front stoops watching the proceedings.

Thursday night, a rally in Patterson Park featured anti-Negro speeches and when the gathering dispersed, white gangs roamed surrounding Negro neighborhoods — throwing eggs and bottles and beating one 16-year-old Negro they cornered in an alley.

At Riverside Park Friday night, policemen sat 10 abreast on park benches while groups of 50 stood in reserve at the corners.

Shortly after Judge William J. O'Donnell of the Baltimore Circuit Court issued an injunction against further rallies, officials of the States Rights party said they would abide by the decision, at least until Monday.

Has No Choice

"We haven't got a damn choice," said Richard B. Norton, Maryland coordinator of the group and one of those indicted for rioting.

"The proceedings this afternoon were most jackass-ean and ridiculous."

Norton, Lynch of San Bernardino, Calif., and Joseph Carroll of Baltimore — both speakers at Thursday night's rally — and Edwin F. Hendle and Paul Cordle, also of Baltimore, were charged with inciting a riot.

"How the hell could I cause a riot that's been going on for years?" Lynch asked at a news conference after he, Carroll and Norton were freed on bond.

Lynch, described in a handbill as "America's most exciting racist speaker," told Thursday night's rally, "I'm not inciting you to riot, I'm inciting you to victory.

Airlines Strike

found itself trying to cope with 50 calls at once.

In Detroit, ticket and reservation clerks were called immediately to their jobs and pilots and stewardesses put on standby status.

Members of the striking machinists union will vote Sunday on their new contract. Initial flights are to resume within four hours of ratification with full service in 231 U.S. and overseas cities expected to be restored in 24 to 72 hours.

But airports still looked quiet. Servicemen dozed on seats at Newark Airport and only a handful of personnel serviced the thin trickle of travelers at New York's La Guardia Airport.

The $3 billion fleet of 735 aircraft grounded during the strike had been serviced around the clock during the walkout and was reported ready to fly with only small delays.

National Airlines said it would be able to resume schedules to some cities within four hours of ratification, the same amount of time TWA, Northwest and United announced it would take to begin transcontinental operations.

Eastern said it expected normal service within 12 hours and complete schedules in 24 hours. Its New York-Boston-Washington shuttle service will resume shortly after ratification.

Full operations on United should be in effect within 36 hours of ratification, a spokesman for the line said.

Fire Levels Camp Dining Pavilion At Walker Valley

Fire struck the main dining hall at Camp Quannacut, Walker Valley, Friday afternoon, destroying it completely and causing an estimated $80,000 damage.

Walker Valley Fire Chief Gregston Greer, an employe of the camp, said he was within 200 feet of the building when the blaze broke out and he said that within 10 minutes it was completely out of control.

"There was no chance to save it," Chief Greer said. The building was of a cedar, pine construction and was very dry from the drought. Another factor in the rapid spread of the fire, was the fact that all the windows were open and the fans were going in preparation of the noon meal. The fire broke out about 12:10 o'clock.

Upwards of 125 answered the call in what Chief Greer called an excellent response. Injured slightly at the scene was Harold Smith of the Pine Bush Fire Department.

Though the building was completely gutted, the firemen did manage to save an adjoining building and a water tower.

Probe U2 . . .

The last reported radar contact with the plane was over Panama. The plane had fuel aboard to keep it aloft until mid-afternoon.

To reach the spot where it crashed, the U2 apparently traveled about 3,200 miles on a straight-line course from Florida and presumably passed over Cuba, Colombia, Brazil and Ecuador, as well as Bolivia and Panama.

The crash site is near the town of Llanquera in a remote area with few access roads. The Bolivian government sent search teams, accompanied by U.S. Embassy officials, to the scene.

There was no word at what altitude Hickan was flying. The U2, with its wingspan of 80 feet and short body, has a capability of flying higher than 90,000 feet and travels at more than 500 miles an hour.

Hickman, the father of six young children, was regularly stationed at the air base at Tucson, Ariz. He was assigned temporarily to Barksdale, a Strategic Air Command installation.

U2 planes have been employed in aerial surveillance over Communist Cuba, but there was no confirmation that Hickman's mission.

Thant told reporters: "As you know, given the way the United Nations is constituted at present, I am not in a position to play a significant role in the Viet Nam conflict."

Seen No Closer

Asked about his own Viet Nam peace proposals, the secretary-general indicated that they were no closer to adoption as a result of his trip here.

"I presented my proposals eight or nine months ago," he said. "The reaction from some parties concerned was not very positive."

The proposals involved halting U.S. air raids on North Viet Nam, a stop of other military activity and peace talks.

Thant called his talks here "very useful, very helpful."

The secretary-general had taken up with Soviet leaders the possibility of a financial contribution to the United Nations by the Soviet Union which has refused to pay its peacekeeping dues.

Thant said the Russians have not yet decided whether to contribute.

Asked about a second term as he would make his decision known around the end of August.

He also is a former employe of the Lawrence Nuclear Radiation Laboratory at the University of California at Berkely and was a onetime Army intelligence officer.

The robbery occurred minutes before the tellers were to have opened the drive-in for business.

Homowack Lodge Blaze

More than 25 firemen successfully stopped a three-story blaze early Saturday morning in the Homowack Lodge, Spring Glen. Ellenville firemen, under the command of Fire Chief George Damm, responded to the call at 3 a. m. and found the blaze spreading to the second floor. According to Chief Damm, the fire had started in the basement of the unoccupied building. The firemen managed to douse it and the main damage was from smoke and water. Recall was at 4:30 a. m.

gotiations with the Communists.

Wilson said the United States does not want to escalate the conflict, nor does Moscow, which he visited a fortnight ago.

Hanoi has not been willing to stop fighting, he said. But he added that sooner or later there must be a political settlement because no military solution to this kind of conflict is possible.

Economy Is Better

Speaking at a news conference, Wilson pictured Britain's economy as basically improving. He said the current crisis stems from a temporary balance of payments setback and shaken confidence in the pound sterling.

He said Britain must as one measure cut back governmental outlays abroad by $280 million. This would be out of military and foreign aid spending, he said.

At the same time, he declared "we have a world role" in both international security and financial affairs and "we intend to discharge those world roles."

He warned West Germany that if Bonn does not increase her financial support for the 59,000 British troops in that country, London will reduce her forces in Germany.

He left open the possibility of cutting back on the 50,000 British servicemen in Malaysia. Other British sources said that with the Indonesian threat subsiding, the Malaysian force might be cut by half.

The United States wants a British military presence continued in that area as part of the free world defense. England has no forces directly in the Viet Nam conflict.

He reminded the senators, who suspended consideration of legislation after Johnson stepped into the dispute, that the final decision was not in his hands, but in the hands of the strikers.

This is what causes the concern of government, union and airlines representatives today.

A vote to reject the proposed settlement would be a slap in Siemiller's face, a defeat for Johnson's so-far-perfect record in settling big labor squabble and would mean millions of dollars more in losses.

And, Congress almost certainly would step in with stiff legislation to break the strike.

The five struck airlines agreed last August to bargain jointly with the machinists union. Braniff, Continental and Northeast Airlines, with employes represented by the same union, did not enter into the agreement and were not struck.

A threatened strike against American Airlines by members of the AFL-CIO Transport Workers Union was postponed for 60 days when the White House announced Wednesday that President Johnson was setting up an emergency board to study issues between the airline and the union.

Speck Is in Jail

He is no problem at all."

The Cook County grand jury revised the murder indictments to insert additional material. John Stamos, an assistant state's attorney, said the revision had nothing to do with Specks' middle name, which is listed in the indictments as Franklin, but on his birth certificate as Benjamin.

Stamos said the amendments included references to the Illinois criminal code. He added that although the original indictments were not invalid, the revisions were more technically correct.

Can Appear

Johnson said he saw no reason why Speck could not appear in Circuit Court for his scheduled arraignment Monday.

Speck's counsel, Gerald W. Getty, chief of the public defender's office, has said he will ask for a continuance. Getty has also said he will enter a plea that Speck is innocent by reason of insanity.

The spokesman explained that the North Vietnamese 324th Division has been using the demilitarized zone to infiltrate into the south.

U.S. Marines and Vietnamese airborne units have been battling the North Vietnamese division in Operation Hastings just south of the demilitarized zone since July 7. An American spokesman said today that the equivalent of two Communist battalions had been wiped out.

880 Enemy Dead

The number of enemy dead was put at 880. Allied casualties were said to be light.

The spokesman said the North Vietnamese regulars are believed to be fleeing through the demilitarized zone toward a sanctuary in the nearby jungles of Laos or in North Viet Nam.

The strike by the high-flying Stratoforts was preceded by a visual and photo reconnaissance that showed large concentrations of Communist troops in the zone, the spokesman said.

Moderate to heavy anti-aircraft fire greeted the B52s.

The raid indicated the United States was inching closer to implementing a doctrine of "hot pursuit" in the demilitarized zone, which has previously been a sanctuary for infiltrators. There have been frequent recent reports that ground troops have chased Communist soldiers into the zone, but no official spokesman has confirmed these reports.

42 Missions

Following Thursday's heaviest raids of the war against North Viet Nam, Air Force, Navy and Marine pilots blasted the north Friday with 42 missions, a number close to the pace that has now become about average.

They struck targets from the Haiphong area south to the demilitarized zone but encountered no Communist Migs and sighted none of the ground-to-air missiles which the Russians have provided North Viet Nam.

One Navy jet was shot down in the raids over the north and the pilot was listed as missing. The loss was reported Friday just after it went down.

The number of U.S. planes downed over North Viet Nam now stands at 312.

In South Viet Nam, an Army helicopter was knocked down by ground fire Friday, but the crew escaped unhurt.

Ground Fighting Light

The spokesman said that ground fighting Friday and early today was light and scattered. In the far north Marines on Operation Hastings had a sharp skirmish with a small force of North Vietnamese soldiers and reported killing eight.

Early today, the Viet Cong put harassing mortar and small arms fire on two small South Vietnamese posts about 15 miles south of Saigon. The militia force defending one post suffered light casualties, but no one was hurt in the other action.

In South Viet Nam, Air Force, Navy, Marine and South Vietnamese pilots flew 788 strikes against Communist targets and in support of ground action.

Pilots said that 267 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese soldiers were probably killed in the strikes and reported destroying fortifications, sampans, barges and supply areas.

A recent visitor to Hanoi reported that North Viet Nam is receiving more supersonic MIG21 fighters from the Soviet Union. He could not say how many of the advanced models were being sent.

Concerned by Failures

He reported also the Communists are concerned by the almost total failure of the surface-to-air anti-aircraft missiles provided by the Soviet Union in bringing down U.S. planes.

More than 400 of the 36-foot long "flying telephone poles" have been fired at U.S. planes, but the Americans have acknowledged loss of only 15 planes to the missiles.

On the political scene:

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko wound up a week-long stay in Japan during which he reiterated the Soviet stand against acting to end the war in Viet Nam unless asked to do so by North Viet Nam.

Gromyko told a news conference Friday the Soviet Union "will continue to give more and more aid" to the Communist side in the conflict "because they are fighting a just war."

Water Levels Are Low

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—Surface waters in most of New York State were extremely low during July, and ground water levels were lower than normal in some areas, the U.S. Geological Survey reported today.

Record lows were measured for both streamflow and ground water on Long Island. Record lows in streamflow will be approached in other areas unless above-normal rain falls in August, the survey said.

Streams were below normal throughout the state.

As for ground water, the only high spots were in far western New York, the extreme northeastern portion, a narrow band on the eastern edge from near Troy south to New York City, and an area around the Mohawk River.

A belt extending from the southeastern shore of Lake Ontario through the Finger Lakes region and into Southern Tier counties was described as normal.

Memoriam

In loving memory of Lucy Gorman, who passed away 3 years ago today, July 30.

Dear Ma:

How much I miss you, as three years went their way. My thoughts are always with you, today and every day. What would I give to see you smile, and have you say hello, that's the part that hurts so much, and makes me miss you so. And, so dear Ma, until the day, when we are all called alone, I know that you'll be waiting to give me all your love.

HUSBAND

Memoriam

In loving memory of Lucy Gorman who passed away 3 years ago today.

She wished no one a last farewell,
Nor even said goodbye.
She was gone before we knew it,
And only God knows why.
Her busy hands are resting now,
Her work on earth is done,
Her worries are all over,
His heavenly crown is won.
It only takes a little space,
To write how much we miss her,
But it will take the rest of our lives.
To forget the day we lost her.

Home Extension Service News

The attractive, flavorful, and nutritious foods you so carefully select for your family can lose their color, flavor, texture, and some of their vitamins and minerals before they reach the table. How much depends on how you store, trim and cook them, according to Phyllis W. Barlow, extension home economist.

From harves to table, some loss of nutrients is inevitable. Some nutrients, such as carbohydrates, are well retained during storage and cooking. Others, such as some of the vitamins and minerals, are easily lost from certain foods, although they are well retained in others. Vitamin C and thiamine are among the least stable. Measures that protect them from destruction and loss usually will protect the most stable nurients as well. Methods of storage and preparation that conserve nutrients usually preserve the most appetizing color, flavor, and texture, too.

Storage — Most fresh vegetables need refrigeration, but some keep better when stored outside the refrigerator Sweet potatoes, mature onions, winter squash, turnips, and rutabagas should be stored at a cool room temperature, about 60 degrees F. White potatoes need darkness and cool temperatures 45 to 50 degrees. If storage at these temperatures is not possible, buy only a week's supply of these vegetables at one time.

Citrus fruits can be stored for a short time at cool temperatures or in the refrigerator. Bananas, however, will darken in the refrigerator.

Bread stays fresh longer in a breadbox at room temperature than in the refrigerator. It should be stored in the refrigerator only during hot, humid weather to prevent the formation of mold.

Canned foods should be kept in a cool, dry plac . Because losses in food value do occur gradually with time, canned foods should be used and replaced within a year.

PREPARATION — Careful trimming is necessary to improve the appearance, texture, and flavor of many foods, but too much trimming causes unnecessary loss of nutrients. The dark green leaves of vegetables are higher in most nutrients than the stems and midribs. When you discard the green outer leaves of cabbage and lettuce and the leaves of broccoli, you are throwing away nutritious parts of the vegetable. When trimming or shredding, always use a sharp blade to prevent bruising. Losses of vitamin A and C occur when tissues are bruised.

If tubers and roots, such as carrots, potatoes, and turnips are peeled before cooking, remove only a thin layer to avoid excessive loss of nutrients.

It is necessary to wash some foods before you use them. Fruit and vegetables should always be washed thoroughly. Washing rice before cooking is not recommended, however, because it causes loss of nutrients.

Cook most foods at low temperatures. High temperatures cause meat and poultry to shrink excessively, fats to break down and smoke, and eggs and cheese to become rubbery. At high temperatures, custards are likely to curdle, and milk acquires a scorched taste. High temperatures also speed the destruction of thiamine and vitamin C.

Use no more water than necessary for cooking vegetables, rice, spaghetti, macaroni, noodles, and other foods cooked in liquid. When you cook food in a large amount of liquid and then discard the liquid, you are throwing away valuable water-soluble vitamins and minerals. Excess liquids should be used in soups, gravies, or sauces.

Overcooked foods cause a loss of vitamins and minerals as well as loss of color and flavor. Serve foods as soon as possible after cooking as holding hot foods at serving temperatures is like overcooking them.

HINTS FROM Heloise

Dear Heloise:

One never knows when children may have a nose bleed or a black eye, or when faintness may occur.

When any emergency demands the application of an ice pack, it sometimes takes so long to disengage the ice tray from the refrigerator, take the ice cubes out, and find the ice bag (if one has one. . . .

I keep several different sizes of water soaked, frozen sponges in waterproof plastic bags in my deep freezer. I also keep two of them in the freezing compartment of my refrigerator.

As it melts, the frozen sponge conforms comfortably to the contours of placement.

Another nice and convenient factor is that the sponge, in its waterproof plastic bag, can be re-frozen without any ado, fuss or muss. Just return it to the freezing compartment.

I would advise placing the plastic bag in a brown paper bag to avoid sticking to the freezer.

The frozen sponges in their plastic bags also help keep food and drinks cold on picnics, and can be used for first aid or opened for wash cloths for sticky hands.

Dear Heloise:

If it's possible, have two sets of kitchen curtains and keep one set laundered and hung away.

When preparing for a party, or when you are expecting special company (and there are so many things to be done), it only takes a few minutes to hang the clean curtains.

After I get my extra curtains all done up, I pin them on hangers and hang them away, and there's never a fold showing when I want to use them.

Alberta Neal

This is a super idea.

Kitchen curtains are usually the least expensive ones in our homes, and they do get soiled faster than any of the others (because of cooking fumes).

So why not have an extra set for a quick change?

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I use an aluminum ice cube tray for storing small jars in the refrigerator.

The jars don't "jump" over as they usually do on a wire shelf and I can easily slide them in-and-out, all at one time.

Dear Heloise:

I like the frozen foods in the plastic pouches, and there is no messy pan to wash.

However, if the food is creamed, it is hard to get it out without messy or burned fingers.

I solved the problem by using tongs. After cutting the opening in the pouch, place the tongs at the bottom of the pouch and pull toward the opening.

Dear Heloise:

If you have a dress that has a smocked top, iron all of the dress except the smocking.

While the smocking is damp-dry, stretch it.

Helen Calise

Helen is right. You can shape the smocking much better this way, and the material won't look matted down.

Dear Heloise:

When I buy a tablet of unlined writing paper, I tear out and tape the guide line sheet on the back cardboard of the tablet.

When I want to write a letter, I tear out a sheet of the writing paper and place it on the back of the tablet over the guide line sheet....and write away.

This is the only way I have been able to overcome the annoyance of the guide sheet moving while writing, falling out, and my pen indenting remaining writing paper.

Dear Heloise:

Save the large spray can metal tops that look like gold or silver. Use them on your dressing table to hold various sizes of bobby and hair pins.

DISCUSS MENTAL HEALTH DRIVE—William H. van Benschoten, president of the Ulster County Association for Mental Health, discusses current membership drive with key members during a meeting this week. With the president seated (l-r) are Miss Frances Maxwell, Saugerties; Miss Kathryn Murphy, past membership chairman and present membership assistant. Standing are Mrs. Harriet Kerr, New Paltz and Mrs. William A. Krum, membership chairman. (Freeman photo by Kruh.)

Plans Also Are Discussed for Schedule in '67

The membership committee of the Ulster County Association for Mental Health met at the YWCA Thursday to formulate plans for the coming year also to bring up-to-date the annual drive that is now taking place. July is membership month for the association.

Attending the meeting were William H. van Benschoten, president of the association; Mrs. William A. Krum, membership chairman; Miss Kathryn M. Murphy, past membership chairman and assistant to Mrs. Krum; Mrs. Fred Beglspiker, Gardiner; Mrs. Harriet Kerr, New Paltz; Mrs. William Gregory, Woodstock; Miss Frances Maxwell, Saugerties, and Mrs. Donald Schoonmaker, Accord.

Mrs. Krum stressed that the association is a member of the Ulster County Community Chest and is one of the 13 agencies receiving financial help from the Chest. With this help and dues received from annual membership drives the association is able to continue its very important work including education and care of emotionally disturbed children, to restore dignity and rehabilitation to former hospitalization patients, to provide for them the human understanding, knowledge and skills which can restore them to the community as whole persons capable of enjoying life's pleasures and coping with life's problems, he added. In a real sense we the members of this organization want to help those unfortunate human beings in our county who have been struck down by mental illness and to educate their families on how to treat a mental ill member," Mrs. Krum added.

Areas in the county not covered by the Community Chest are the townships of Esopus, Hurley, Kingston, Marbletown, New Paltz, Rosendale, Saugerties and Ulster. The committee feels that all residents of the county who need assistance from this organization should receive it but in order to do this, dues from members are very important. Anyone wishing to help by becoming a member may do so by contacting the chairman in the area or direct contact with the county office, 27 East O'Reilly Street.

Doing The Right Thing By Elizabeth Post

SISTER COMPLAINS AT NAGGING; SHOULD CHILD GO UNCORRECTED?

Dear Mrs. Post: We have seven children and recently my sister invited the whole family to her daughter's wedding. At the reception were were seated at long tables. I have always stressed good table manners at home, but I spotted Billy, who is 4; scooping his food across his plate straight into his mouth. I corrected him. In the course of the meal I must have corrected 10 or 15 times, sometimes to little one who were still learning; sometimes to the older ones who were showing off. Later I was severely criticiezd by another sister who said this was not the time or the place to teach.—Eileen Black.

Dear Mrs. Black: Ordinarily I would agree with your sister that no one, child or adult, should be critized or disciplined in front of others. However, in the circumstances you describe, I feel you had no choice but to correct your children, especially the older ones who were trying to attract attention. May I suggest that it would be pleasanter for you as well as the other guests if you left the youngest of your children home for another year or two, or until they need less supervision?

Permanent Value of Gift Important

Dear Mrs. Post: One of the men in our company is retiring and we, the employes, would like to present him with a gift when he leaves. What would be suitable? Must it be something personal or may we give him something for his house? We had though of a globe or portable bar.—Pam.

Dear Pam: The important thing is that the gift be of permanent value. It may be personal, such as a wrist watch, or it may be something for his long as it will give lasting pleasure.

Is Stamp's Position Significant?

Dear Mrs. Post: I have received an invitation to a house warming from a relative from whom we have been estranged. The postage stamp was inverted and I've been told that that has a particular meaning. Could you offer an explanation?—Mrs. R. B.

Dear Mrs. B.: I suspect this particular meaning was that the sender put the stamp on upside down by mistake. When we were kids, it used to mean that we were sending our love to the recipient!

Jackie's Half-Sister Gets Married Today

By KELLY SMITH

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — If your half-sister is Mrs. John F. Kennedy, and Caroline Kennedy and John Jr. are taking part in the wedding ceremony, it's pretty hard to make it a private affair.

Janet Auchincloss has found that out.

Janet was 7 and a flower girl when her half-sister was married to John F. Kennedy in 1953. Now a sun-tanned, pretty brunette of 20, Janet will become the wife late today of Lewis Polk Rutherford, 21, of New York.

"I really wish people weren't so interested," Janet said, eying the crowd that has gathered. "I wanted this to be a family affair."

But Newport hasn't seen a wedding like this one since the Kennedy marriage.

Janet has 31 persons in her wedding, a gown made by Fontana of Rome and a guest list of more than 800 persons.

Although she is Episcopalian, Janet's wedding will be in St. Mary's Roman Catholic church where the Kennedy wedding was performed. The groom is Catholic.

The reception is at Hammersmith Farm, the 75-acre estate of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Janet's parents.

Cars full of the curious slowed down as they cruised by the estate and the occupants tried to catch a glimpse of a famous face. The lawn was dotted with green and white canopies erected for the reception and Secret Service men kept watch at the entrance.

At Friday's wedding rehearsal, more than 20 spectators wandered into the church to watch Caroline, John and their cousins practice the processional.

A group of neighborhood youngsters with bare feet and shorts attempted to get pictures and autographs.

"That's my sister," John, 5, yelled several times during the rehearsal, pointing to Caroline. John occupied himself by counting windows and people and by whispering to several girls.

In the procession, John put his arm around cousin Hugh Steers and said, "Walk faster."

Caroline was a poised 9-year-old. She called John aside several times and cautioned him to behave and then tried to act as if she didn't know him.

Mrs. Auchincloss is the mother of both Janet and Mrs. Kennedy. Auchincloss is Mrs. Kennedy's stepfather.

Following the wedding Janet and Lewis plan to live in Hong Kong where he will do graduate work.

Dear Abby . . .

Wealthy Bachelor—Well Protected

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Why does a psychoanalyst charge so much? The cheapest one I have been able to find costs $25 an hour. I certainly can't afford that. Am I supposed to postpone my nervous breakdown until I can pay for it?

I can't understand why doctors dedicate themselves to curing the sick mind and then set their rates so high that few people can afford them.

NEEDS TREATMENT

DEAR NEEDS: A psychoanalyst must have four years of college, four years of medical school, one year of internship, and three years of residency in a psychiatric hospital. Then he, himself, must submit to psychoanalysis which requires four one-hour sessions a week (at $25 an hour) for three or four years.

In addition, he takes four years of lectures and seminars which cost him about $4,800, plus another 200 hours of supervision from a training analyst at $25 an hour. By the time he is ready to hang out his shingle, he has spent almost $50,000 on his education and is 35 years old. Does that answer your question?

* * * *

DEAR ABBY: It came to my attention that my new daughter-in-law resents my referring to her as "George's wife" or "my daughter-in-law." I don't dislike her, actually, but she is George's fourth wife in nine years and I can't always remember the name of his current wife on a moment's notice.

George divorced his first wife (Margaret) to marry a girl named Charlotte, and for the longest time I kept calling Charlotte "Margaret." Then he divorced Charlotte to marry Cynthia, and I had the same trouble. I kept calling Cynthia, "Charlotte." Now he has taken another wife and I am not taking any chances. Should I explain this to her?

CAREFUL IN TORONTO

DEAR CAREFUL: Don't explain. With George's record for changing wives, it hardly pays to tax your memory with their names. George could eventually take the fifth.

* * * *

DEAR ABBY: As you know, bachelors who have money are reluctant to get married these days because they fear that if the marriage doesn't work out, it may cost them a great portion of their material wealth. One cannot blame them with the present divorce rate.

Can a woman tell a man she would be willing to sign a legal paper saying she will make no claim on his money or property if the marriage ends in divorce? What better way can she prove to him that she loves him for himself, and himself alone? Or should she just go ahead and have the papers drawn up and present them to him?

WILLING TO SIGN

DEAR WILLING: I advise you not to have any such papers drawn up. Most bachelors with "material wealth" are well aware of how to protect themselves against designing females. (That's probably why they're still bachelors.) Wait until he proposes. HE may present YOU with the papers.

* * * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HAD IT": Do not tell your husband's boss. But tell your husband you are thinking about telling his boss. The results will be the same.

Hyde Park Rips Esopus, 11-0, to Gain Bi-District Title

CinquemaniHurls One-Hitter for Dutchess Club

Town of Esopus couldn't solve the fireballing slants of righty Craig Cinquemani and were trounced, 11-0. in a Bi-District Little League tournament game by Hyde Park last night in Highland.

The District 17 (Dutchess County) champions pounded out 14 base hits, including a pair of booming home runs by shortstop Pat Lehan. They scored four times in the opening session and were never threatened.

Cinquemani allowed only a fifth inning single to Chuck Schoonmaker. He walked a batter and sent 13 of them down on strikes. It was an impressive performance.

The setback eliminates the Ulster County champions from tournament play. It marked the first time an Esopus team had captured county honors.

Hyde Park will travel to Chatham on Tuesday for another Bi-District contest.

Top Soccer Teams In Round Robin

NEW YORK — Three of the world's finest soccer teams — Santos of Brazil, Benfica of Portugal and A.E.K. of Greece— will compete here for the United States Cup of Champions. The three-game round-robin tournament begins Wednesday, Aug. 17 at Randalls Island Stadium.

The tourney will mark the first appearance in this country of soccer's two most celebrated players, Pelé from Brazil and Eusebio from Portugal.

"These two are probably the most exciting pair in the game today," said Enzo Magnozzi, head of the New York Inter Soccer Club, which is sponsoring the competition. "Their appearance in New York should do a lot to stimulate interest in the game here."

Last year Santos, without Pele, played in New York and drew a capacity crowd of 23,000 persons to Randalls Island in a match against Milan of Italy. Magnozzi expects similar turnouts this time and is making arrangements to erect additional grandstands at Randalls Island.

Santos is matched against A.E.K. in the opening match of the round-robin, Wednesday night, August 17. The Brazilians then take on Benfica Sunday afternoon, August 21, and A.E.K. plays Benfica in the final game Wednesday night, August 24.

Saratoga Opens Monday for 24-Day Run

19 Stakes Races Are Scheduled

Saratoga ,the "Capital of Thoroughbred Racing" will play host to the best thoroughbreds in the country for a period of 24 racing days, beginning Monday, Aug. 1.

The New York Racing Association, maintaining the high quality of the sport at the Spa, has screduled 16 stake races with total added money of $597,500.

The big physical change at Saratoga this year has been the installation of the new mutuel system — Automatic Totalisator (U.S.A.) Ltd. — which has proved most successful at Aqueduct this year. Along with the new system came a change in infield tote boards. Now there are three, as at Aqueduct, and as they are lower than the old board they will make for better viewing of the horses on the backstretch.

New Innovation

An innovation for the Saratoga meeting will be "A Day At The Races," a program to give patrons, especially newcomers to racing, a more complete experience at the track. The program starts with the morning workouts at 8 a. m. and the enjoyment of coffeeand snacks in the grandstand. Then a tour of the National Museum of Racing and the viewing of motion pictures of racing. A racing show, or demonstration, has been planned following the museum visit in a tent to be set up near the Recreation Building across the street from the track and then a picnic lunch under the trees. The climax, nine races with a reserved grandstand seat. This program will be offered every day but Saturday at an overall charge of $4 per person.

The racing program, as usual, offers stakes opportunities to the top horses in all divisions, including jumpers. As has become tradition at Saratoga, stress is placed on races for two-year-olds and seven stakes have been scheduled for juveniles, climaxed by the 62nd running of the $75,000 added Hopeful on closing day of the meeting, August 27.

The "big" race for three-year-olds is the $75,000 added Travers at a mile and a quarter on the third Saturday of the meeting, August 20. The Travers is the oldest stakes race in the United States and will be having its 97th running this year. The first year of racing in Saratoga was in 1863 at the area called Horse Haven, across the street from the present site. Then, in 1864, the track was built where it now stands and the Travers was inaugurated that year.

Every once in a while a stable comes along with strength throughout the divisions and this year the big threat is the Wheatley Stable—Ogden Phipps combine trained by Eddie Neloy. He has strong threats among the two-year-olds such as, to mention a few, Successor Top Big, Great Era, Great Power. Buckpasser is one of the top three-year-olds of the season and Bold Lad has come back from a knee operation to be one of the top handicap horses.

Buckpasser in Travers

Buckpasser, of course, will be seen in the Travers. Bold Lad is expected to face the best in the top race for older horses, the 5$0,000 added Whitney Handicap on the first Saturday of the meeting, August 6.

Three-year-old fillies have their mainstakes opportunity in the $50,000 added Alabama on Saturday, August 13, and the two-year-old fillies have their 'Hopeful," the $50,000 added Spinaway, on Wednesday, August 24.

There will be two stakes races over the turf course and four stakes for jumpers, two over hurdles and two for steeplechasers.

The annual yearling sales — August 9 through 12—once again will be held at the Spa. And, this year, there are two special sales the following week. One, the breeding stock of the late Viscount Astor, of England, purchased by William H 'kman and scheduled to be auctioned on Tuesday, August 16. About 20 of the mares are in foal.

The other special sale, this year, will be on Wednesday, August 17, and will be to cut down on the stock trained by Hirsch Jacobs. The auction will offer 38 horses in training—many stakes winners—and about 24 yearlings bred by the Bieber-Jacobs Stable.

The National Museum of Racing, on Union Avenue across from the track, is open daily with free admission and contains racing's Hall of Fame and one of the finest collections of Thoroughbred art and memorabilia.

First post time each day of the meeting is at 2 p. m. and nine races are scheduled daily with the daily double on the first two races.

ALONG THE FAIRWAYS

Is it possible to get a free lift from a hole-in-one?

Sounds silly, but it did happen recently at Wiltwyck Country Club. Ken Lowe's "hole-in-one" however, was a most unusual one.

It seems that he hooked his tee shot from the 13th tee into the cup on the 16th hole. At Wiltwyck that's possible, especially if they're pitching you inside.

The dilemma created by Lowe's errant shot was quickly solved by the club parliamentarian who ruled that Lowe could remove his "ace" from the 16th cup, drop off the green and proceed in the general direction of the 13th green. That's how it all came about.

The Wondrous Casey

Casey Stengel's acceptance speech at the Hall of Fame ceremonies at Cooperstown should be made required reading for all college English majors to prove what wondrous things can be done with the language in the hands of an expert like the Ol professor . . . Casey gave the assembled New York Yankee brass a gentle needle with the observation that: "They said Yogi Berra didn't know much, He only won the pennant the first year." . . . Asked if the Yankees planned a wholesale shakeup at the end of the 1966 season, Jackie Farrell, the Mighty Mite of the Yankees public relations department, quipped: "I wouldn't know, but some of those guys better not leave anything in their lockers at the end of the season."

Upgrading the Open

Woodstock Open scheduled Friday, Aug. 19, is extending invitations to the area's best known amateurs in an effort to present the best field in the history of the 27-hole medal event. As the most prestigious tournament of the season, it figures to attract its share of the top simon pures. An invitation has been extended to Nick Raasch of DeWitt, N. Y., the new State Amateur Champion. . . Rick Spears, the Port Jervis pheonom, sent regrets—he will be competing in the Virginia Eastern Amateur that day. But Denny Lyons of Burning Tree, Conn. will make a repeat showing, along with his illustrious dad, Denny Lyons, Sr., who just missed a $10,000 jackpot on the new TV hole-in-one show. . . Northeastern New York PGA stages its Sectional championship (36 holes) Monday, Aug. 8, at Columbia Country Club at Claverack. Gene Sarazen will play a courtesy round.

It Seems to Us: If those City Softball League teams are serious about quitting the league because (a) one of the umpires has been known to carry signs protesting the Viet Nam war and (b) they refuse to accept a protest decision, they should be invited to depart the scene quickly and quietly as possible.

How Good Are You?

If you're over 50 years old and considered yourself a fair sports buff, how many of the following names can you match with the proper sport:

Yale Okun, Oscar Egg, Tommy Milton, Bitsy Grant, Erwin Rudolph, Jacques Fournier, Bobby McDermott, Abe Espinosa, Barry Wood, Jimmy Smith, Johnny Blood and Laverne Fator.

First man to come up with the true answers gets two tickets to a Yankee ball game.

Rodriguez Shoots 66 In Tourney

By DALE BURGESS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Hungry again after a week's treatment for low blood pressure, little Chi Chi Rodriguez today makes a spirited charge after the $16,400 first prize in the 500 Festival Open Golf Tournament.

He belted out a 6-under-par 66 over the long, wet and not-quite-ready Speedway course Friday for a second round tie with rookie John Schlee at 138.

The 127-pound Puerto Rican has made only $9,500 on the tour this year after piling up more than $100,000 over the last three seasons. His best 1966 finish has been a 13th place tie in the Colonial at Fort Worth, Tex.

"I was thinking maybe I am getting rich and lazy," Chi Chi said after blasting seven birdies for the 66, his lowest score since his second place finish in the 1965 Western Open.

"But I have never been lazy," he added, "And when I can only hit the ball 220 yards and have pains in the back of the neck, I have an examination and find out I have no blood pressure at all hardly."

Eating Liver

He went to a specialist in New York last week and was given some liver pills. He also has been eating liver for dinner every night.

"I'm hungry again and gaining maybe two ounces a day," he said happily. "I thought it was funny I was playing so bad when I had played so good."

Schlee, whose 66-72 was the reverse of Rordriguez' combination, said the even-par second round "was pretty good for a rookie." He was undisputed leader the first day.

The Wysong brothers of McKinney, Tex., weren't feeling so well and both went home after the second round. Dudley, runnerup for the PGA title last week, had an ailing back and amateur Charles was disgusted after an unbelievable 17 on the No. 14 water hole.

New Zealander Bob Charles birdied the last three holes Friday for a 3-under 69 and a 140 total that tied him with Gene Littler for sixth position.

The cutoff point, 150, left 75 players of 144 starters.

Costello Leads Classic With 139

Bobby Costello of Wiltwyck Country Slub leads in the race for low gross trophy in the Mid-Hudson Junior Golf Classic. Costello's two best rounds of 139 gave him a 14-stroke edge over runnerup Tom Gaffney of Wiltwyck, who has 153.

Costello posted a 2-under-par 68 at Woodstock his last time out. Other low nets: Ed Byman, Wiltwyck, 160; Drew Rubin, Woodstock, 12;6 Ed Spiegel, Wiltwyck, and Arnie Shienvold, Twaalfskill, are tied with 166.

Roger Daley of Catskill leads the low net race with 136. Other leaders: Paul Stevens, Catskill, 140; Dennis DeCicco, Twaalfskill, 141; Steve Bayer, Red Hook, 143; Paul Kwasnowski, Twaalfskill, 144.

Wiltwyck leads the team race by a wide margin with 950 points. Catskill is second with 1061, followed by Woodstock, 1074; Red Hook, 1097; and Twaalfskill, 1137.

Blakely Wins Junior Honors

Dave Blakely toured the course in 40-39—79 to capture Class A honors in the Wiltwyck Country Club Junior club championship held yesterday. He finished ahead of five other contestants.

In Class B, Joe Bostic shot 41-40—81 for top honors, beating six other opponents.

Mantle Hits 494th Homer in Yankee Win

By JOE MOOSHIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Mickey Mantle became the second greatest home-run hitter in New York Yankee history Friday night but the one-time boy wonder's goal is to play "three or four more years."

Mantle, whose brittle legs have kept him from becoming perhaps the greatest player in baseball history, crashed the 494th home run of his career leading the Yankees to a 2-1 victory over Chicago.

The upper-deck blow, his 21st of the season, put Mantle past the mark of 493 set by Lou Gehrig and left Mickey second in Yankee history to Babe Ruth who ended his career with 714 homers.

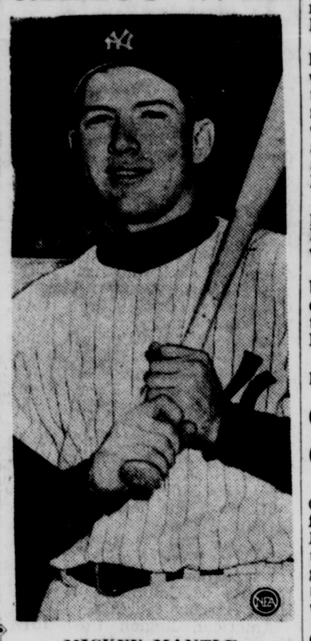

Mantle, who at 34 doesn't like being called an "old man" and doesn't believe he is old even as baseball age goes, claims he feels better than he has in several years.

"I think the operation on my arm last winter prolonged my career but I can't explain why my legs feel so good," said Mantle as he unwound the tight gauze from his weary legs.

"Every time I hit a homer or do something, someone comes around and wants to know when I'm going to retire," said Mantle. "I'm not going to retire. I think I can play three or maybe four more years. Hell, where else can I make $100,000 or more a year outside of playing ball?

"Goals? well, I always said I'd like to hit 500 home runs and I'd like to do it this year but sometimes I get those long, dry spells. Anyway, there's no substitute for baseball especially when you're going good and you're team is going good.

"I honestly feel that I should be doing as well as I did five or six years ago because I haven't been this well physically in a long time.

MICKEY MANTLE

"There's a greater thrill in hitting home runs now than there used to be. Years ago I used to take it for granted that I'd hit a home run now and then."

Not only is Mantle hitting home runs at a young man's pace but he's also leading Yankee batters with a .290 average.

In fact, Mantle is hitting home runs at a rate of one in every 12.9 times at bat this season. That pace is exceeded only by Frank Robinson of Baltimore with a 12.1 ratio and Hank Aaron of Atlanta with a 12.4 average.

That's not bad for a man who is expected to retire every time he swings his big bat.

Rochester Tops Toledo Again

By The Associated Press

The surging, Rochester Red Wings are keeping the pressure on the International league-leading Columbus Jets, who are struggling to hold onto their one-game lead.

The Red Wings have won 11 of their last 13 games, jumping for fourth place and four games out of the lead. Columbus has won eight of its last 13 games.

Rochester made if three in a row over third-ranked Toledo Friday night with a 4-2 win. Columbus, meanwhile, nipped the last-place Syracuse Chiefs 1-0 on Wilbur Wood's three-hitter. It was Wood's fifth shut-out of the season.

Ed Rakow pitched his third shutout Friday night as Toronto whipped Richmond 5-0. Buffalo and Jacksonville split a twin bill with Jacksonville winning the opener 8-7 in an extra inning and Buffalo taking the nightcap 6-5 on Gus Gil's fifth inning solo homer.

After Rain Stops

Braves Rally to Nip Giants

Menke's Single Decides Issue; Mets Bow, 7-4

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

In Spain the rain falls mainly on the plain but in Atlanta, it was Herman Franks who wound up all wet.

There was Franks doing a mental rain dance in the San Francisco dugout Friday night when the Georgia heavens opened up as his Giants led the Braves 5-3.

For 72 minutes, Franks watched the rain and the scoreboard, which already showed Pittsburgh's come-from-behind 5-3 victory over Philadelphia. Then the precipitation stopped and instead of a rain-shortened 5-3 victory, the Giants wound up with a 7-6 setback.

Bucs Hold Edge

After the rain stopped, Rico Carty walloped a three-run homer for the Braves, giving Atlanta a 6-5 lead. Willie Mays' 23rd homer tied it for the Giants in the ninth but the Braves pulled it out in the bottom of the ninth on singles by Carty, Ed Mathews and Denis Menke.

And to make matters worse for Franks, the hero for the Pirates was ex-Giant Jose Pagan.

Pagan ripped a bases-loaded, two-out double in the bottom of the eighth that drove in three runs and beat Chris Short.

Pittsburgh's winning rally started with one out, when pinch hitter Gene Michael singled. Manny Mota and Gene Alley singled for one run and after Roberto Clemente forced Alley, Donn Clendenon walked, loading the bases.

Then Pagan unloaded them.

Elsewhere, the Chicago Cubs downed the New York Mets 7-4, Cincinnati shaded Houston 4-3 and St. Louis blanked Los Angeles 4-0.

Three Met errors and two wild pitches by reliever Jack Hamilton contributed to a three-run Chicago eighth that beat the Mets. Glenn Beckert's two-out, bases-loaded single broke a 4-4 tie.

Ron Swoboda had a three-run homer and Larry Elliot a bases-empty shot accounting for all the New York runs. Ron Santo connected for the Cubs.

Jaster's shutout was the 12th this season against the Dodgers — most suffered by any team in the majors — and extended the Cardinal left-hander's personal runless string against them to Larry Jaster's shutout was the 12th this season against the Dodgers—most suffered by any team in the majors—and extended the Cardinal left-hander's personal runless string against them to 27 innings.

Jaster allowed only five hits, none until the sixth. It was the fifth straight victory for the Cardinals and their 11th triumph in the last 12 games.

The Reds beat Houston for the first time this season with a four-run fifth inning as Jim Maloney went the distance for his 11th victory.

Maloney scattered seven hits and struck out 13.

Pro Grid Roundup

Several Stars Sign, Rosters Are Trimmed

By RON RAPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Jimmy Brown is still in England, but some of the pro football holdouts who don't have acting contracts to fall back on have started trickling into their training camps.

Among the stars who came to terms Friday were defensive end Earl Faison of San Diego, flankerback Pat Studstill of Detroit and a quartet of Baltimore Colts: tight end John Mackey, flankers Jimmy Orr and Willie Richardson and defensive end-placekicker Lou Michaels.

The Colts were so shaken by the negotiations with their absentees that a club official warned that "never again will the Colts negotiate with a player who walks out of training camp."

Expected in Fold

Split end Raymond Berry is the sole Baltimore player not yet signed and he is expected to be in the fold in a day or two.

Faison, who played out his option with San Diego last season, came to terms with the Chargers just a day after he and General Manager Sid Gillman had denied they were close to an agreement.

Gillman said the terms were "fair to Earl and fair to the club. Absolutely no bonus was involved."

Studstill's agreement with the Lions left only safetyman Bruce Mahar and guard Ted Karras unsigned. The Lions picked up rookie Joe Wellborn from the New York Giants and said they will try him at guard, center or linebacker.

But while some were joining their clubs, others were being cut. Friday's roster trims included Eddie Robinson Jr., Bob Walton and Bob Windham of the New York Jets; Marty Sica and Sam Montgomery of Green Bay, Willie Ross of the Buffalo Bills; and Bob Post, Randy Staten, Dick Souells and Peterson Mathews of the New York Giants.

Hannum to Coach West Cagers In Stokes Benefit Aug. 14

MONTICELLO, N. Y. — Jack Twyman, who is making arrangements for the seventh annual benefit basketball game honoring Maurice Stokes, featuring National Basketball Association stars, at Kutsher's Country Club, Monticello, New York, on Tuesday night, Aug. 16, announced today that Coach Alex Hannum of the Philadelphia 76ers, NBA Eastern Division champions last Spring, will handle the Western squad.

Arnold "Red" Auerbach of the world-champion Boston Celtics, who has coached in the previous seven contests, will handle the Eastern team. The Redhead, who has retired from active coaching, has advised Twyman that he will be available to coach the Stokes Benefit Game so long as his services are requested. Auerbach, in seven games, astonishingly, has a 2-5 record, having coached the last two winners after losing the first five annual games.

Two years ago Hannum made his debut in this game and became the first coaching victim of Auerbach in this established mid-summer fray. Hannum will be coaching the team built around Billy Cunningham, Lucius Jackson and, in all probability, Wilt Chamberlain of his own Philadelphia team. The first two have accepted invitations to participate. Chamberlain is immersed in a business venture on the West Coast and has indicated that he most likely will be able to fly in to participate for the 8th successive year.

Auerbach will call on his star defensive ace, K. C. Jones and will get adequate help from his own John Havlicek and Tom Gola, recently retired New York Knickerbocker veteran guard. The Celtic general manager is reasonably sure his new coach and pivot ace, Bill Russell, will be in the starting line-up against his longtime rival Wilt Chamberlain.

Legion, Masons Win BRL Tilts

Legion beat Food Fair, 7-4, and the Masons ripped the Elks, 7-6, in last night's Babe Ruth league games.

Harry Lyons hurled a four-hitter for the Legion. Ken Gilligan tripled for the winners while Bob Darling swatted a pair of doubles for Food Fair. Lyons fanned 14 and walked seven to outduel Pete Helmich.

Frank Barry hit a homer and Jesse Caprotti a bases loaded triple to pace the Masons. Steve Van Dyke won the decision over Fred Kachura.

Aparicio Loses But Birds Win

Increase AL Lead To 13½ Games; Yanks Top Chisox

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Luis Aparicio is losing his personal battle, but he's helping the Baltimore Orioles win the war.

Aparicio, overshadowed by Baltimore's power brigade of Robinson, Powell and Robinson, played his part again Friday night as the Orioles defeated Minnesota 3-0 and took a 13½-game lead in the American League, their biggest bulge of the season.

Aparicio vowed before the season started that he would do his best to win back the stolen-base title he lost last year after winning it in his first nine years in the league.

"We don't never get started last year," the 32-year-old Venezuelan explained. "Nothing serious — mumps, cut on a finger, things like that. But I used to playing every day. I come in for a couple of games, then hurt, then come back. I don't get started."

The fleet little shortstop really hasn't gotten started this year on his march toward regaining the stolen base crown. With just 60 games remaining, he has stolen 16 bases and trails six other speedsters, including Chicago's Tommie Agee who leads with 29.

"You can help the ball club a lot by stealing," Aparicio said in spring training.

Now he's found another way.

Elsewhere in the league Kansas City defeated Detroit 4-1, California edged Cleveland 2-1, New York nipped Chicago 2-1 and Washington swept Boston 13-4 and 6-5 in 15 innings.

Aparicio got the Orioles started against the Twins with an infield single in the fourth. He then scored on Brooks Robinson's double. His eighth-inning bunt single put pitcher Jim Palmer in position to score on Boog Powell's single. Frank Robinson hit his 31st homer in the seventh.

Kansas City downed Detroit with a four-run explosion in the second inning. Pitcher Lew Krausse drove in the first two runs with a double, and Bert Campaneris followed with a two-run single.

Fred Valentine lashed seven hits in Washington's sweep, four in the first game when Frank Howard drove in four runs. The Senators scored nine runs in the fifth inning, eight of them unearned as the result of four Boston errors, three by Rico Petrocelli.

The Senators won the nightcap on Ken McMullen' two-out, run-producing single in the 15th. The Red Sox took one-run leads in the 10th and 13th innings, but Washington came back each time and tied it. Boston's Dalton Jones sent the game into overtime with a run-scoring double in the ninth.

Graebner, Richey Seeking Berths on Davis Cup Squad

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — The Davis Cup team which America will send into action against Mexico in two weeks won't be named until Tuesday—but for Clark Graebner and Cliff Richey Saturday could be the day of decision.

Graebner and Richey put on contrasting performances Friday as they won their way into Saturday's semifinal showdown at the Eastern Grass Court Tennis Championships. The general assumption is that one or the other will get the No. 2 Davis Cup singles assignment behind Dennis Ralston.

However, Davis Cup Captain George MacCall said Friday the make-up of the team is "still wide open — by no means definite."

Still, the Graebner-Richey match may have some say in deciding the matter. Graebner, seeded fifth here but only ranked 13th in the country, is a hot player, having just won the Pennsylvania Lawn Championships. Richey, ranked third in the nation and the top seed here, is noted for being at his best on clay courts.

The matches against Mexico in Cleveland Aug. 13-15 will be played on a hard, fast composition surface.

Graebner, who seems sure to make the U. S. top 10 rankings this year, said his being named to the Davis Cup team last year — he was a doubles standout in the loss to Spain — helped build his confidence.

"I played well," he said after walloping Davis Cup teammate Charley Pasarell of Santurce, P.R., 6-3, 6-3. "I was confident I could win because I beat him last week in Pennsylvania. I had him 40-0 a lot of times and even though he made it 40-30 in many games he really had to work for those points and tired himself out."

Lucky Break

Richey got a lucky break in beating national junior champion Bob Lutz of Los Angeles, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4 — a controversial baseline call that kept him alive in the next-to-last game and prevented a service break.

At 15-40, Lutz returned service cross-court for an apparent winner and a 5-4 lead. But the linesman, Hollis Dann, was momentarily blinded by the sun and didn't see the ball. The umpire R. Michael Dunne ruled it out as many in the gallery of 2,800 groaned in disbelief.

Was the shot good?

"You saw it," Richey said. "I should have lost. It was the first time I ever got a good call. Those kind of matches leave you shaking for hours."

Plan Home Sale Of Circus Ducats By Rotary Today

The Rotary Club of Saugerties circus campaign is under full swing, Dr. Dexter O. Arnold, president, announced today.

Rotary Club sponsors the 27th annual edition of Mills Bros. Three-Ring Circus here Aug. 3 for afternoon and evening performances under the big top at Beers' lot, Washington Avenue Extension.

Noting that the Old Sawyer Grist Mill Fund will derive heaviest proceeds from the sale of advance tickets, Dr. Arnold urged all those planning to attend the circus to purchase tickets from Rotary members now.

"There is something about a really big circus with its enormous tent, bespangled performers, lumbering elephants, prancing horses and, of course, its grease-painted clowns, that is traditionally a welcome form of wholesome entertainment in any community," he said.

"To put our reconstruction of the Old Grist Mill fund campaign over the top, we are going to conduct a house-to-house ticket sale today, July 30," Dr. Arnold said. "When a member comes to your home we sincerely hope that you will buy your circus tickets from him. Remember, if you wait until circus day to buy your tickets, you will pay more and we will receive a much smaller percentage."

The 1966 edition of Mills Bros. Circus features an international array of circus stars including aerialists, acrobats, clowns, contortionists, jugglers, tumblers, wire walkers, high pole artists, an all-girl aerial ballet and an Arabian Nights opening spectacle.

Animal presentations will include the ever popular liberty horses, a mixed group of animals, llamas and pony, plus the world famous Mills Bros. elephant ballet.

Special reduced tickets are available from all Rotary members.

Register Early For Art Show, Committee Urges

All amateur or professional painters residing in the Town of Saugerties, who plan to exhibit samples of their work in the Saugerties Public Library's much publicized Outdoor Art Exhibit, have been urged by the exhibit planning committee to register early for the show. The request has been made to allow the committee to calculate the proper amount of space that will be needed for display purposes.

The outdoor art show is scheduled for Saturday, Aug. 13, 10 a. m. until dusk, at the library. The public is urged to attend the admission free event.

Artists may enter as many original paintings as they wish; an out-of-town jury, headed by Woodstock artist John Pike, will judge the show and prizes in the form of fine art books will be awarded to winners.

Truth Packaging Bill Opponents Seek Its Demise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of so-called "truth in packaging' 'legislation are considering asking the House Commerce Committee to shelve the controversial measure.

Supporters of the bill admit it is facing serious difficulty in the Commerce Committee.

Rep. Harley O. Staggers, D-W. Va., the committee chairman is trying to marshal support for the legislation "to get it back on the right track," as one supporter put it.

Staggers said later he was "surprised at the opposition that has been developing toward making a start in this field."

A possible indication of the situation came when several lobbyists against the legislation expressed pleaure to a reporter at the way things went at the opening week of the House committee's hearings on the Senate-passed bill.

"These have been the first congressional hearings on this bill that have dealt with facts rather than the emotional issues involved," said one.

The legislation's chief purpose, administration supporters say, is to enable consumers to make an informed choice by making it easier to compare prices of products. The controversy centers on a provision to enable the government to limit the number of different weights in which a product could be sold.

At least four Democrats on the committee who favor the bill say this provision is "in trouble." Other parts of the legislation, less controversial, would require clear and accurate labeling of consumer products and curb "cents off" promotions and such size designations as "jumbo," "giant" and "large."

The committee has 40 different versions of the legislation under consideration. Significantly, only two were introduced by committee members, one by Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-Pa., and the other by Staggers.

Staggers' bill is similar to the one passed by the Senate last month. But it includes an additional provision permitting the government to restrict sizes and shapes as well as weights and quantities.

"I do believe the time has come — and it is sad that it has — that Congress must step in and set some guidelines," the chairman said Friday after a witness told the committee a producer of a mashed potato mix concealed a 36.6 per cent price increase by reducing the amount of potatoes in the box while keeping the price of the box constant.

Desert of Flowers Wins First Prize At Art Exhibition

Helen Matulavich of Saugerties won an art competition held at Ferroxcube Corporation during exhibit of employes' paintings at the firm's Saugerties plant, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

The competition was judged by Paul Domville, distinguished Woodstock artist. Domville was formerly chairman of the Department of Fine Arts of the graduate school of Fine Arts at the University of Pennsylvania. He is now Professor Emeritus.

Helen Matulavich won first prize, a $75 bond with her tapestry "Desert of Flowers." Martha Navjoks was awarded second prize, a $50 bond, for her penicl on cardboard sketch of the Manhattan skyline. Gladys Myer took third prize a $25 bond, for her "Winter Landscape." Darrell Johnson and Walter Moore were awarded honorable mentions.

Domville said he had awarded prizes on the basis of good design, taste and use of color. He pointed out that the competition was very close due to the extreme difficulty in judging work in different madias. He said he was very impressed with the level of competence shown by Ferroxcube artists.

Other employes participating in the exhibition were Frank Kruglinski, Rowan Dietz, Louan McMickle, Gertrude DeSawal, Maria Valentine, Mildred Overbaugh and Nancy Bellens. Frank Kruglinski organized the show with the help of Allan Unger of the personnel department. According to Kruglinski, many of the artists were able to sell their paintings as a result of the exhibition.

Videcom Expands To Glasco Area

Videcom of Saugerties has announced the expansion of its television cable facilities to Glasco.

The firm will construct 4½ miles of TV cable in order to serve the 300 families of Glasco, Mr. Sabino, general manager of Videcom and its subsidiary the Liberty Video Corporation.

To insure the best grade of television reception possible, Videcom will upgrade its present equipment to the most modern type transistorized amplifiers available.

Each resident of Glasco will be approached by a representative of the TV cable company, in order to introduce Videcom's reputation for prompt service and courteous response to customer inquiries.

Ready for Action

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The phrase about old soldiers fading away wasn't written for Sgt. Steven M. Nugent, 60, of the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve. He is ready for action.

Nugent, one of the Leathernecks 'oldest sergeants leaves Sunday for a two-week amphibious training exercise at Little Creek, Va. He will be the oldest man there, but that doesn't bother him.

"I can do anything those young kids can do," Sgt. Nugent said.

Once a professional boxer, Nugent says he runs a mile each morning before breakfast "so I can always pass the Marine physical."

"I don't drink, either," said Nugent, who will be 61 in September.

Support Harlem Site

New York State Employes Council 50 came out in support of Comptroller Arthur Levitt's proposal to build a state office building in Harlem. Council 50 further declared that it was completely opposed to the state renting one millon to three million square feet of office space in the coming World Trade Center. Al Wurf, executive director of Council 50, and John Sterrett, chairman of the four affiliated unions of Council 50 located in New York City whose members will be working in the proposed new facilities, jointly stated "the location of the World Trade Center is least convenient for the state employes who have to travel to work every day."

"The subway stations these employes will use are presently overcrowded and will have not only additional traffic from the World Trade Center, but will also have 25,000 more passengers who will be working in the new federal building. It's questionable whether these transportation facilities could cope with this, without an unbelievable hardship on future employes."

Business Week in Review

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A flood of excellent second quarter earnings reports came out this week but earnings of the big three automakers weren't among them.

Oil companies, railroads and manufacturers reported record or near record profits.

This indicated that the economy, spurred by demands of the Viet Nam war, was rolling along at a good pace.

Picture Is Good

While some economic indicators have signified that the business boom has lost some of its zip, the profits picture was good as the business upturn approached its 66th straight month in August.

Among the companies reporting high second April-May-June profits were Bethlehem Steel, Boeing, Jersey Standard, Shell Oil, New York Central Railroad, Gulf Oil and Pennsylvania Railroad.

But the picture was not so good for the automakers, which have seen domestic sales declining from the record 1965 level.

	1966	1965
General Motors
Net	$546,035,382	638,460,046
A share	$1.90	2.23
Sales	$5,501,643,726	5,657,497,124
Ford
Net	$216900,000	237,300,000
A share	$1.97	2.14
Sales	$3,311,900,000	3,085,600,000
Chrysler
Net	$54,400,000	61,800,000
Sales	$1,430,000,000	1,370,000,000

Cites Tight Credit

Chrysler attributed the decline in domestic sales of passenger cars to tightness of credit, higher interest rates, acceleration of tax payments and a boost in the auto excise taxes.

None of the automakers mentioned the auto safety issue as a contributing factor.

Despite the downturn, 1966 looms as the second best auto sales year in history.

"While the market for automobiles in the second quarter showed some decline from last year's peak level, the outlook remains favorable," said Frederic C. Donner and James M. Roche, chairman and president, respectively, of General Motors.

"The economy continues strong, consumer income is rising and unemployment is at a very low level. Used car prices are firm. The long-term growth factors — the increases in population and multiple-car families, the trend to suburban living and the growth in the replacement market — continue to be favorable."

Earnings Lower

Another giant of industry, U.S. Steel Corp., also found its earnings lower in the second quarter than a year earlier. Big Steel earned $77,428,706, or $1.43 a share, on sales of $1,194,294,062, compared with $81,042,633 or $1.38 a share on sales of $1,229,130,354 in the 1965 second quarter. The absence of a requirement for preferred stock boosted per share earnings this year.

The generally good earnings failed to inspire the stock market. On Monday the market suffered its worst setback since the assassination of President John F. Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963. Brokers blamed the same factors that have contributed to the tight money, weakness of the British pound and the Viet Nam war.

With production of 1966 model cars nearing an end, output this week slowed to an estimated 68,300 passenger cars. This compares with 103,465 last week and 147,093 a year ago.

Sales of U.S.-made passenger cars in the middle 10 days of July fell 5.3 per cent from a year earlier. However, total volume increased to 230,168 from 216,035 because there were nine selling days this year against eight a year ago.

Note Decline

Steel production declined last week for the fifth consecutive week, totaling 2,424,000 tons against 2,469,000 tons the previous week.

Orders for new machine tools rose sharply in June, with defense buying for Viet Nam apparently supplying at least a portion of the push. Bookings totaled $177.5 million, compared with $158.8 million in May and $134.5 million in June 1965.

TROPHIES FOR BUILDERS—Members of the committee of the Home Builders Association of the Hudson Valley make final arrangements for the annual outing of the group Tuesday, Aug. 2, at the Beekman Country Club, Hopewell Junction. Examining trophies (l-r) to be awarded during the event are Albert Steinberg, Wappingers Falls; John Jakuba, Hopewell Junction, general chairman and Matt Gormley, Newburgh, executive officer of the Home Builders. Gets More Time

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has been granted an additional week to prepare its replies to petitions relating to the merger of the Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads.

The Interstate Commerce Commission said Friday the department's deadline wes extended to Aug. 8.

No request, however, was filed for postponement of the Sept. 30 effective date of the merger.

In asking for the added week, the department said it was necessary because of the volume of petitions and the possibility of anti-trust violations in the merger of the two large carriers.

Tin Available

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Services Administration says it will make surplus Grade A tin available for sale beginning Monday at seven storage locations in the East and Midwest, including Scotia, N.Y.

A spokesman for the federal agency said Friday the purpose of sale is to provide the metal to areas where it has not been offered for some time.

Missing Boy Is Found Unharmed

Missing from a Sullivan County camp since Thursday night, 15-year-old Walter Jackson was found Friday afternoon as he walked along a back road some distance from where he had been staying.

Trooper Thomas Searles said the boy was found by him and Forest Ranger Aaron VanDeBogart and Michael Finn, chief counselor at Echo Lake Camp, Parksville, where Jackson was vacationing.

Several state troopers, Conservation Department men and volunteer firemen from area units took part in the search after the boy was reported missing. Trooper Searles said Jackson was found at about 4 p. m.

Runs to Fire

Hanson's fire trucks couldn't handle the blaze, so the engine sped down the track for a rendezvous with units from the Madisonville department, which extinguished the fire.

Vatican Unhappy Over Speculation On Birth Control

By BENNET M. BOLTON

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican has sought to silence speculation on the forthcoming decision by Pope Paul VI on birth control.

The Vatican's most influential publication, L'Osservatore Romano, said Friday no one knows yet what stand the pontiff will take on the question.

At the same time it echoed past statements by Pope Paul and his predecessor, Pope John XXIII, rejecting the view that the world's population explosion could be solved by birth control.

The Vatican's statements were included in a front-page editorial. They made clear that Vatican officials were unhappy over a torrent of recent press reports and speculation on changes the Pope might decree.

Pope in Seclusion

Pope Paul, in the seclusion of his summer residence at nearby Castel Gandolfo, is studying the question whether to alter the church's ban on contraception. His decision is generally expected to be announced by early fall.

"We do not know, no one knows in this moment what the answers will be to the grave problems concerning Christian marriage," L'Osservatore said.

"An announcement is expected," it said, "and the writings we refer to try to guess at it, describing anxious expectations, and reporting misunderstood, and perhaps even worse, misreported leaks and statements."

One recent press report quoted unnamed Vatican sources as saying the Pope might allow married couples to use a contraceptive pill for up to two years after they have a child. Other reports have foreseen a decision revoking the church's ban altogether.

Negative Approach Charged

L'Osservatore noted that press speculation included the view that the church would change its traditional stand because of world problems today, but it described as "a negative approach" the argument that only birth control could ease the food shortage of the world's overpopulated regions.

"No doubt an irresponsible population increase, as can be seen even in the life of a small community, raises grave, anxious problems, not only in the economic sphere," L'Osservatore said.

"But this is only one aspect, and not an essential one. More births, longer life span owing to the progress of medicine, probably will increase world population whatever efforts are made to limit it."

Dies in Cycle Crash

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—A 17-year-old youth was injured fatally and his companion hurt seriously Friday night when the motorcycle on which they were riding struck a light pole and tree along Delaware Avenue.

The crash took the life of David Levitan of Buffalo. His companion, Bradley Jacobson, 16, also of Buffalo,, was reported in fair condition today at Sisters Hospital with Multiple injuries.

$700 Cold Cash

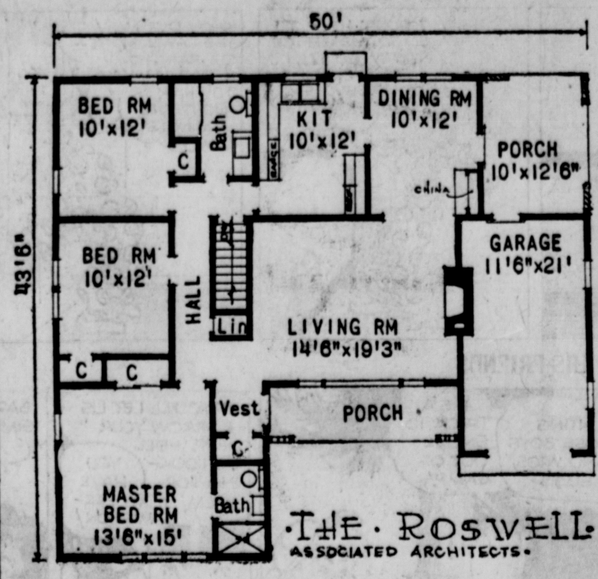

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Missing: $700 in cold cash.

Kenneth Collins told police Friday seven frost-covered $100 bills were missing from the freezer compartment of his refrigerator when he returned home.

A 16-year-old babysitter also was missing. Police said they were looking for her.

THE ROSEWELL
ASSOCIATED ARCHITECTS

Home Designed to Screen Against Direct Sunlight

By JACK McELENEY

Today's home by Associated Architects is a charming variation of the ranch-type house. "The Rosewell" is designed essentially in the shape of the letter "U" to screen out the disadvantages of sunlight, leaving only the wanted qualities.

Look at the accompanying floor plan, and you'll see how this is possible. The living room is recessed, as it were, and is shielded from direct sunlight by the garage and master bedroom; as an added measure, the front porch is covered. Thus, the sun rarely if ever shines directly into the living room—a situation that can be mighty pleasant during summer.

All of which makes a 14½ by 19¼ foot living room a pretty valuable asset. With its picture window and fireplace, the room practically guarantees good times for family and friends, whatever the occasion.

Your friends will be impressed with the other areas of "The Rosewell," too. For example, the rear patio is large and sheltered, ideal for warm weather meals (it's handy to the kitchen) and for fun, even on showery days.

The patio shows you how utility has been combined effectively with beauty and recreational values in this home. It connects the garage with the house proper, serving as a covered passageway for the driver and his passengers.

New let's look at the sleeping quarters. There are three bedrooms in "The Rosewell," ranging in size from 13½ to 15 feet to 10 by 12 feet. All with ample closets, all with fine, big windows — and the master bedroom has its own bath, complete with shower stall. Because the bedrooms are all in a line and all at one end of the house, the utmost in privacy is assured.

The bath is compact, yet adequate for a home this size. With the tub situated away from the window, bathers won't be subjected to draft.

Similarly the kitchen is compact, and well designed. The home maker will be delighted to find she saves many a step in this up-to-date food preparation center. Meals are served in comfort in the full-sized dining room, rather than in the kitchen itself.

To see all of the details of "The Rosewell" (I've just touched on the highlights) send for the complete plans, which are available at moderate cost. Use the accompanying coupon and say whether you want drawings with or without basement. Living area is 1,280 square feet, plus another 460 square feet for the garage and porches.

Here are a few additional facts about the plan: The design conforms with property and construction requirements of the Federal Housing Administration (FHA); electrical wiring is to meet fire safety rules of the National Electrical Code. "The Rosewell" may be built with wood siding or brick veneer, or of concrete block; your plans show how all three attractive materials may be used.

Your order also will bring you (at no extra cost) a set of specifications to help protect your investment.

Luci Johnson's Wedding Will Receive Full Television Coverage

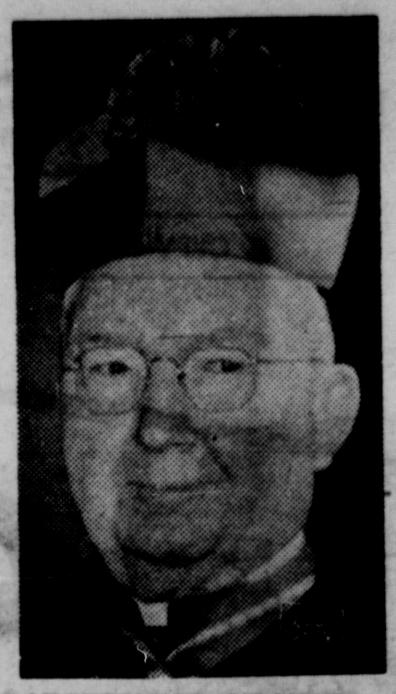

LYNDA JOHNSON

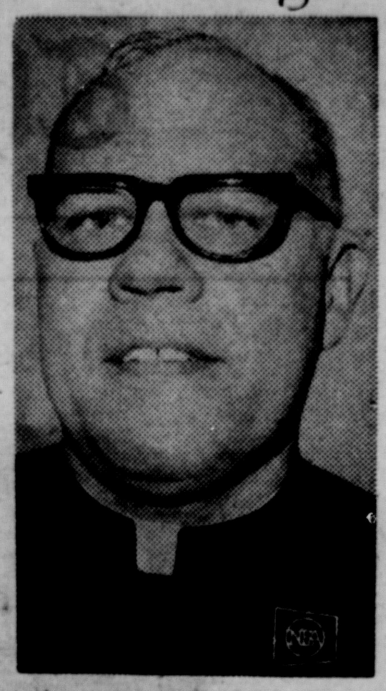

MRS. JAMES RAY

GERARD NUGENT SR.

ARCHBISHOP O'BOYLE

MEMBERS OF THE WEDDING include Lynda Bird Johnson, the bride's sister, maid of honor, and Mrs. James Ray, a girlhood friend from Hale Center, Tex, matron of honor. Gerard Nugent Sr., the groom's father, will be best man, standing in for brother Lt. Gerard Nugent Jr., serving in Viet Nam. Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle will officiate at the nuptial Mass.

A CHICAGO PRIEST, the Rev. John Kuzinskas, assistant pastor of St. George's Church will perform the marriage service at the Aug. 6 wedding of Luci Johnson and Patrick Nugent in Washington's National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

Suppose You're Invited to Wedding Of Luci Johnson

LUCI JOHNSON

Several hundred people in different parts of the country will soon open up an envelope and be thrilled to find an invitation beginning "The President and Mrs. Johnson . . ."

Immediately questions will rise. What do we wear? How do we answer the invitation? What can we send as a gift?

The problem of how to reply to the invitation has been answered for them. I understand that response cards have been included with the invitations. Personally, I regret that the President's implied approval of this growing custom automatically stamps it as in good taste. I'm sure that this was done to make it easier for the recipients, since the Johnsons could hardly have been worried that prospective guests would not reply.

The question of what to wear is almost as easily solved. Washington is hot in August, and the wedding will be held at noon, so those are the important facts to consider.

The men will wear lightweight dark business suits with conservative ties and white shirts.

Women will wear the coolest possible short summer dresses. Silks, chiffons or thin synthetics are all appropriate, and the color could range from navy blue, through any pastel shades to a print. Gloves and hats, or veils, will be a must. Dresses may be sleeves, if they are modest in cut and design. Speaking of clothing, congratulations to the Johnson ladies for prevailing upon the President on this occasion, to wear his cutaway.

The third major question will be that of deciding on a gift. What in the world can you send a girl who literally has everything? If the guests know Luci personally, perhaps they can think of something which would have a personal meaning to her. For example, a beautiful photograph or a painting of a spot which they visited together. Or bookends or an ornament representing some activity which they had enjoyed together.

Acquaintances who do not know the bride as well, will have to resort to their ingeniousness; with one thing in mind. Luci has been surrounded by some of the most beautiful things in the world for years, and her appreciation of truly lovely possessions must be highly developed. Whatever gift is chosen, large or small, it should be of the very best quality, the finest of its kind that can be found.

If you're one of the lucky ones, remember to reserve your rooms in Washington immediately. There will be crowds of the curious in town, just hoping for a passing glimpse of the festivities. Get to the church early, and don't forget to have your invitation in your hand. You should arrive, I would imagine, at least an hour ahead of time, but the time will be well passed in watching the famous guests arrive and listening to the beautiful choir music.

At the reception, the procedure will be the same as at any other wedding. The guests will go through the receiving line speaking to the President as "Mr. President," wishing Luci happiness and congratulating Pat. After that they are free to enjoy the food and festivities and the opportunity to see and meet a host of prominent and fascinating people.

What a shame that most of us can only enjoy the thrill vicariously! But we can at least all join in wishing Luci and Pat a beautiful wedding and a life of happiness.

40,000 Witness Hill Cumorah Pageant on Friday

PALMYRA, N.Y. (AP)—About 40,000 persons, — including 36 Mormons from Hawaii who formed an entertainment group two years ago to finance their trip, witnessed the fourth, and next to last, performance Friday night of the annual Hill Cumorah Pageant.

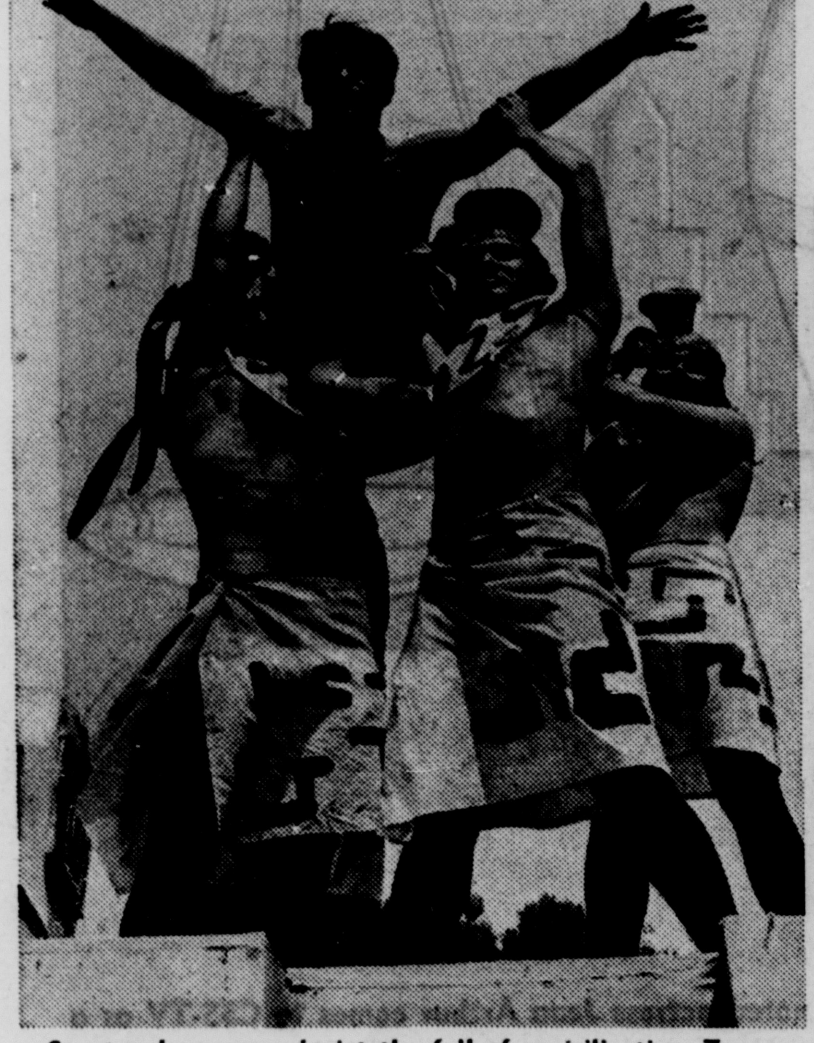

The crowd, the largest to see the religious spectacular this year, probably will be matched or exceeded in size at tonight's closing presentation, a spokesman said.

The Hawaiian Mormons were among the most enthusiastic in attendance Friday night. They had raised $1,650 from their presentations of "strictly and authentically Hawaiian" music and dance in the nation's newest state, enough for the down payment on their airline fares.

Since arriving on the mainland, the group has performed before Mormon-sponsored audiences in 16 cities and are scheduled to appear in 21 more. While in Washington, D.C. Monday, they will be greeted by members of Hawaii's congressional delegation.

CHURCH SPECTACULAR

A pine-fringed hill near Palmyra in New York's Finger Lakes region is the site of an annual religious observance that in the 29 years since it began has become one of the world's most spectacular pageants. Thousands each year gather at the hill, called Cumorah, to see the story of Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) re-created. Twenty-five stages were erected on the hillside and a cast of 430 assembled for this year's pageant, July 26-30.

Spectacular scenes depict the fall of a civilization, Zarahemia, which Mormons believe existed in America before Christ but was destroyed when its people drifted from the teachings of the Lord. Here, a victim is offered up in the human sacrifice scene.

A fanfare of trumpets opens the Hill Cumorah Pageant. The heralds are stationed on the hill where, according to Mormon belief, Joseph Smith, founder of the church, in 1823 discovered golden tablets buried by the Angel Moroni and recounting the history of the lost civilization.

Jean Arthur Comes Back to TV From 'Retirement'

RON HARPER plays the law school graduate, son of star Jean Arthur; brilliant woman defense attorney, in the Jean Arthur Show — half hour comedy Monday, CBS-TV this fall.

By EDGAR PENTON

HOLLYWOOD — Jean Arthur, whose glamorous but gamin face and indescribable voice used to turn on everyone within range of a motion-picture theater, is, happily, back among us.

Miss Arthur is the star of a new television comedy series, The Jean Arthur Show, which premieres in color Monday, Sept. 12, 10-10:30 p. m., Eastern time, CBS-TV.

THE PRODUCTION is intended to showcase the many facets of Miss Arthur's talents as actress and comediene. It is not only The Jean Arthur Show — it IS Jean Arthur's show.

The character Miss Arthur plays, Patricia Marshall, an attorney, will hold no surprises for those who have been fans of hers over the years. Patricia is, in a word, whacky.

Or as one of the producers of the show put it, somewhat lyrically, to be sure:

". . . The quality of the girl is still present in her . . . The breathless, tously (sic) headed, somewhat Tomboyish quality is still very much alive. Life . . . that, and the love of it, are the qualities Patricia Marshall radiates, along with a glowing maturity . . "

THE ABOVE, as indicated are not the words of the show's press agent, but a direct quote from the fellow who seems to be Miss Arthur's No. 1 fan, Jay Richard Kennedy, who — along with Richard Quine — is co-executive producer of the show and the man charged with getting the whole thing on the road, in a manner of speaking.

As Kennedy says, this Patricia Marshall character will ignore the tenets of logic to become the most consistent person in society — and also its best attorney. One is tantalized by daydreams of a courtroom face-off between this Marshall woman and Perry Mason.

Mrs. Marshall is also the mother of a lawyer, played by six-foot, one-inch Ron Harper, which may be only difficult-to-swallow aspect of the entire show. A girl who looks as great as Miss Arthur — or Patricia Marshall — just CAN'T be old enough to have a grown son.

IN A WAY, that's just about the way it works in the show, with the rather sober sided son who often assumes a parental role to reprimend his mother for staying out past midnight (because she wanted to watch the moonlight on the waves—things like that).

Mrs. Marshall's television "clients" have one thing in common —the uncommonness of their legal problems. Her unorthodox but strictly lawful attack on her client's difficulties before the bar will result in, we are assured by the men guiding the destinies of the show, unique solutions to unique problems.

Miss Arthur, personally, bears little resemblance to the scramble-brained, dizzy creatures she has portrayed on the screen. In truth, she is a shy and retiring woman. She would rather read a book between "takes" of her show than engage in offstage theatrics.

MISS JEAN ARTHUR emerges from semi-retirement to star in The Jean Arthur Show, half hour Monday evening comedy on the CBS Fall Schedule.

THE ZANY OF such motion-picture classics as "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "You Can't Take It With You," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and "The More the Merrier" dropped out of sight at the conclusion of production, and only her closest friends could find her.

After "Shane," her last feature motion picture, Miss Arthur quit the Hollywood scene and moved to the Monterey Peninsula, a rugged area of breathtaking vistas of sea and mountains some 400 miles north of the film capital, but light years away in the style of living.

She remained there until last year, when she was coaxed out of her retreat on the Pacific to film an episode of "Gunsmoke."

Miss Arthur seemed to enjoy the swift pace of television production and quietly looked around for a series that might be "right" for her.

IN SHORT, she found the format submitted by Quine and Kennedy to be just her sup, and the character of Patricia Marshall a familiar one to her.

Kennedy deplores the word "comeback" used in connection with this glittering star who has delighted audiences for more than two decades. "I like to think of her as the retired, undefeated champ coming back to defend her title," he says.

Well, anyway you want to put it, it's nice to have Jean Arthur back among us.

All American Wins

You sometimes wonder how they select those go-go dancers for teen-age shows like the syndicated Where The Action Is.

Steve Ciro, 20-year-old choreographer, says "the All-American type of kid always wins the audition."

"We like our dancers to be clean, very fresh, youthful looking and not the stringy-haired types you often see at the discotheques.

Bidding Both Old and Bad

By JACOBY & SON

Today's hand was played in the days before anyone had thought of a four no-trump convention to ask for aces. Therefore, South made no effort to reach a grand slam in spite of knowing that all he would need from dummy would be two aces plus the king of trumps.

To say that South was disappointed by the dummy is an understatement. He glared as if it were a poisonous snake.

East won the club lead with the ace and returned the suit.

South wanted to be in dummy immediately so he discarded his ace of diamonds and let dummy win. Then he led a trump and finessed his queen. West produced the king and returned a third club for South to ruff. South played out his ace of trumps. West showed out and South was down two.

The hand is shown for two reasons. The first is to point out the folly of North's immediate trump raise. We generally approve of raising partner's first bid suit with three trumps and no other logical bid. But here North held such a minimum opening that it behooved him to discourage his partner by a two no-trump call rather than to encourage him by an immediate raise.

Secondly, the hand shows the classic safety play situation. Playing at six, South could not afford to lose a trump trick. His best play for all the tricks was the one he adopted. It would win for him against king-small or king and two small in the East hand.

Had the contract been five South would have made six. His best play to avoid two losers would be to lay down his ace. That would drop the singleton king whereupon he would go to dummy and finesse against East's jack.

Sticks to Movies

Guy Stockwell, who was once a member of The Richard Boone Show company, explains why he hasn't done television in two years:

"Frankly, it's killing on an actor. I'm going to last a lot longer if I stick to motion pictures. The work is easier."

Stockwell has made six films in the last year and a half including a remake of the old Gary Cooper classic, "Beau Geste."

Hitchcock Reports

Alfred Hitccock, who figured prominently in pushing Grace Kelly to stardom, doesn't think the Princess of Monaco will ever return to her "old career."

"Why should she?" said the director. "She now has the best role in her life. You couldn't ask for a prettier setting than the French Riviera. And just think of all those extras at her command."

Haunted by Label From Medic Show

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It has been a few months since Richard Chamberlain abandoned his bedside manner as Dr. Kildare, but the earnest young medic continues to haunt him.

"And will continue for some time to come," he admits.

After all, the NBC series has been on the network for five years and will continue to rerun itself to death in the late summer. Now Chamberlain is faced with the challenge that comes to all stars of television series: establishing his own identity.

As a first move in the campaign, Chamberlain embarked on a four-week tour of summer theaters in the Noel Coward comedy, "Private Lives." The results?

"Mixed," the actor admitted. "The audiences laughed all the way, but it was tough playing an intimate comedy in theaters seating up to 4,000 people.

"While the audiences seemed to like the show, I could sense the resistance to my appearing as something besides Kildare. During the early part of the play, there would be an undercurrent of comment as people said things like, 'But his hair isn't blond!' or, 'He doesn't sound the same on TV.'

"After the performances there would be an autograph line, which was kind of a drag, but it did give me a cross-section of opinion. Men would say, 'I bet you're glad you don't have to play that goodie-goodie any more,' while women commented, 'Why did you change your hair?' "

The hair is part of his escape plan. He changed from his good-guy blond to a shade somewhat darker than his natural brown.

Chamberlain realizes, of course, that it will take more than a change of hair shade to create himself in a new image. He's reading scripts in search of a movie to aid the campaign.

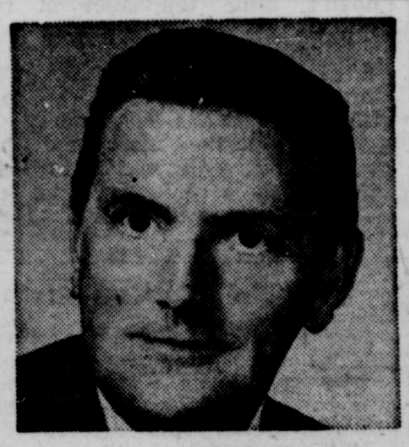

He made two movies under his MGM contract, which still extends a year and a half. Neither advanced his film career

TV Questions & Answers

VIVA LA JUDY—Why don't you tell the Judy Garland critic who feels she should quit that the singer is an American symbol!—Sandy Taylor, San Angelo, Tex.

We thought it was Kate Smith and the American bald eagle.

Because they don't know any better.

The actors are the best of buddies on and off the set. Hedison particularly admires Basehart's acting.

STILL UNKNOWN — In the last new episode of A Man Called Shenandoah did the hero discover his true identity? — Dianne Robinson, Hagertown, Md.

No. The series, alas, starring Robert Horton, is now in summer re-runs. It won't be back in the fall and we'll never know who Shenandoah is.

LONG ISLAND SNOB — What's Phyllis Diller going to do in her new ABC-TV comedy series? What part will Richard Deacon do? — John M. Kurtz, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The comedienne plays Phyllis Pruitt a wacky widow of a wealthy stockbroker in the Pruitts of Southhampton. When the series opens, viewers learn her family is broke and that the U. S. Government doesn't want the rest of the world to know because it would upset Wall Street. Deacon plays her income tax man who is befuddled by the situation.

We didn't. Put the blame on your local station. The series stopped production several years ago. You were seeing re-runs.

SUMMER SADNESS — Will the Lucy-Desi Comedy Hour series be on again this summer?—Mrs. Suzanne Fulton, Kewanee, Ill.

No. The series has been repeated twice already and CBS-TV thinks it deserves a rest.

Lost in Space for Adults

BY ERSKINE JOHNSON

HOLLYWOOD—"How long do you think the show can last?", the NBC executive wondered.

The question was directed at Gene Roddenberry, creator-producer of this fall's new NBC-TV science-fiction series, Star Trek, which has as its background the exploration of space two centuries hence.

"Well," smiled Roddenberry, "I've read that there are three million planets identical to earth. With three million planets to visit, I figure the show can last quite a long time."

Another Lost in Space?

He promises, "No monsters, no gadgets, no gimmicks."

Then he explains the approach.

"We are accepting the fact that space travel of the future will be fully as comfortable as staying at a resort hotel. we will be looking at tomorrow's astronauts, in a huge 14-level space ship, after they leave our world.

"What they find on other planets, and in space itself, will be science fiction and adult science fiction, which ours is, can be exciting literature. I've been warned, 'Don't aim too high with your stories.' But I don't agree. I'm aiming high. That's why I'm happy we are on NBC, where there is a strong feeling that a TV show can be a critical as well as a commercial success.

"But don't get the idea that I think entertainment is a nasty word. The show will be entertaining. We're not overlooking action, excitement or adventure. But we won't be writing down to the child mind. We're writing up to adults who relish science fiction at the H.G. Wells-Ray Bradbury level."

Gene Roddenberry, a plus six footer with a quiet voice, has had a career bordering on the fiction he has created as a TV writer dating back to Dragnet and highlighted by the six years he spent writing Have Gun, Will Travel.

He is a World War II B-17 pilot who flew 200 missions in the South Pacific and then became a post-war commercial pilot who wrote and sold articles and fiction as a hobby.

The birth of TV intrigued him as a writer to the point in 1949 when he quit his airlines job and settled down in Hollywood "where I knew television eventually would be based.

"But I was a little early," he grins, "and to make ends meet I joined the L. A. police department and wrote under an assumed name, Robert Wesley." An early sale of a story to Dragnet convinced him he had made the right move.

"Then one day my wife said, 'Look, Gene, your job as a policeman brings you $435 a month but your writing hobby is earning you $1,100 a month. Why don't you just stick to your hobby?'

"We went to dinner, to a Chinese restaurant, to talk it over. I opened a fortune cookie and it read, "A change of name will bring you fame.' I opened another one and it read, 'Tomorrow is an excellent time to change jobs.' Intrigued and amazed, I opened still another one and this message read, 'You may be sure of it.'

"That did it. I quit as a policeman the next day. I still have those three fortune cookies, framed and on my desk."

Innovations at Batcave

Several innovations have been added to the Batcave. There is now a service elevator which Albert uses to reach the Batcave. There is also a "Compressed Steam Batpole Lift" which Batman and Robin use to get from Wayne Manor to the Batcave. As they travel down they pull the "Instant Costume Change Lever" which explains THAT. There are also two additional exits from the Batcave and a sub-subterranean grotto.

TV Questions And Answers

Did Dean Jaggar leave Mr. Novak because he got a bad deal in the series? Has he retired?—Richard Walker, Miami, Fla.

The actor left the series on his doctor's request. He was replaced as the principal of Jefferson High in the final episode last season by Burgess Meredith. As far as we know, he is still taking it easy and hasn't returned to work.

Will "Sunset Boulevard" be shown on TV again? Will "Giant" and "Gone With the Wind" ever be shown?—Mrs. Larry Woods, Abilene, Tex.

"Sunset Boulevard," starring Gloria Swanson, is now in general release and is shown from time to time. Check your local station. The other two haven't been released to TV and won't be until they quit being money-making attractions in movie theaters.

The child, daughter of Darren and Samantha, was "born" Jan. 13, 1966. She'll be more active on the series as she grows older.

Why does Leo Durocher, manager of the Chicago Cubs, hate the Houston Astrodome baseball park so much? How much did its scoreboard cost?—K. Kelly, St. Paul, Minn.

Durocher, as do many players and managers, objects to the domed stadium's "astro-turf"—synthetic grass. The scoreboard cost $2 million.

Too Busy to Get Feet Off Ground

Hollywood — A funny thing happened to Paul Burke when his role of Col. Gallagher on television's 12 O'Clock High inspired him to take flying lessons.

Two of his children — 18-year old Paula and 16-year-old Brian twisted Dad's arm and tagged along.

Within three weeks Paula had soloed.

A few months later Brian did too.

Dad still hasn't his solo wings. "I just don't have time to go to ground school," he lamented about Paula and Brian high-hatting him around the Palm Springs airport where they have a Cessna- 150 at their disposal plus a weekend home.

'I'm just to busy up in the air," he laughed, "flying that thing over there.'

That 'thing' on Stage 4 at 20th Century-Fox studio was a mock-up of a B-17 in which he spends so much of his time as the 8th Air Force squadron commander.

But the lack of solo wings he hopes to win some day doesn't mean that Paul Burke is completely grounded. His association with the show has won him a number of high-ranking Air-Force friends always eager to take him up into the wild blue yonder.

He's one of America's few civilians who can say he's flown at twice the speed of sound as a passenger in an Air Force F-106 and he has made a 3,000 foot parachute jump with a military chute.

Now filming episodes for his second season with 12-O'Clock High, Paul is happy to say he's won over a once partially hostile audience which he admits resents his replacing Robert Lansing as the star of the show.

"At first," he levels with you, "I received a lot of nasty letters from people who said they loved Lansing, hated me. But before the season ended many of them wrote me letters of apology, saying they had changed their minds. I'm grateful to them and the audience which has kept the show in the top 25."

For the new fall season, 12 O'Clock High, now in color, will have Burke and his men becoming more aggressive. "The first show of the season ends with the Allied invasion of Europe, which means we'll be taking our planes to bases away from England, and that we'll be on the offensive."

The show being filmed this day left Burke laughing about getting even with Hollywood glamor dolls. The plot takes Burke and his men to Russia on the first shuttle bomb run over Berlin. The Russian hotel in which they are housed overnight has a hugh marble bathtub and he decided to enjoy the luxury of a bubble bath.

"Whenever Paulette Goddard, Marlene Dietrich or Lana Turner took a bath for a movie scene they barred male spectators from the set," he remembered. "Well, I'm getting even—when we shoot the bath scene I'm going to bar all feminine spectators from the set."

Puzzled Leopard

Because trained animals are so difficult to find outside of Hollywood, the animals needed for Tarzan are taken to the location sites in Brazil and Mexico. One day, while the crew was filming in the Brazilian jungle, a leopard got loose and ran into the bush. It took about three hours before he was found, and when he was found the poor animal, a Los Angeles native, was siting only about 150 yards into the jungle, puzzled about his surroundings.

An episode of Tarzan, NBC-TV's fall TV series, called for a lion cub. It turned out to be a hard thing to find in Brazil, where the series was filming. A young man, who had never been out of his province nor on an airplane, was dispatched to find a cub. He checked zoos and every other spot where he might be expected to find a cub, without any luck. He finally found a kitten, flew back to the location site and took the kitten to the show's director saying, "Would you believe a lion?"

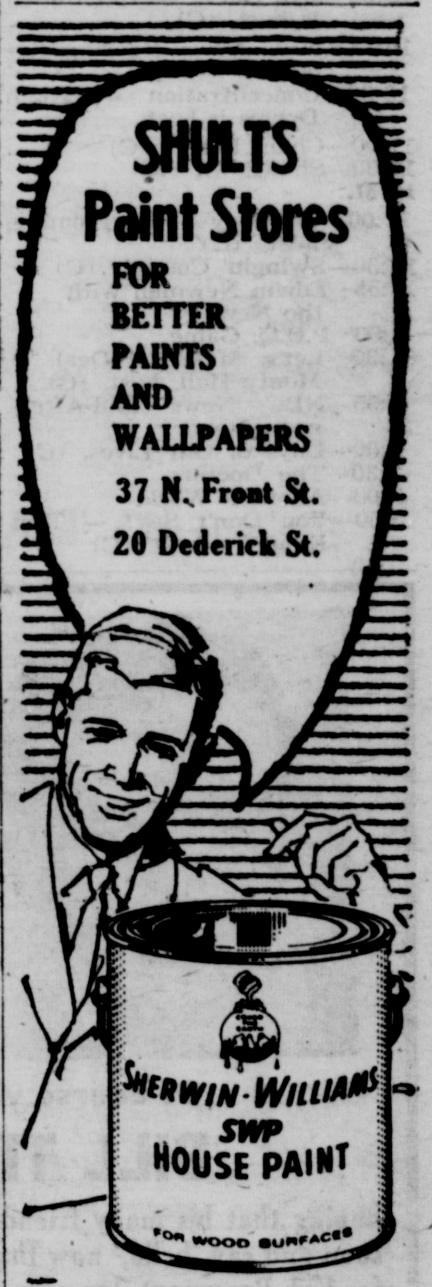

P.S. Stripes were painted on the kitten and it is hoped the audience will accept the casting.

Another time while Tarzan was filming in the Brazilian jungles, the wooden markers used to mark where the actors were supposed to stand were lost. So bananas, plucked off the vine, were used. The set broke up when Ron Ely, who plays Tarzan, was heard to say, "Hey, someone's on my banana."

Bette Davis and Barbara Stanwyck are great Peyton Place fans. Once when Barbara missed an episode of the series she made a long distance call to a friend who also liked the show, to find out what had happened on the episode.

Soaping Up for Bigger Careers

By BILL BYERS

NEW YORK — Soap operas continue to be "nice work if you can get it" for young performers who say they are dedicated to "more serious type of theater."

For Keith Charles, a lanky San Franciscan, they mean he can afford to appear off Broadway at $65 per week and for Gaye Houston, a petite New Yorker born into a show business family, soaps mean she can afford to slip off occasionally to do summer stock.

Both plan some day to be prominent Broadway stars.

Keith is currently appearing as Rick Oliver, a glib, fast-talking disc jockey, on the daytime CBS-TV melodrama The Edge of Night. In the evening, he jumps on his motor scooter and heads for Greenwich Village where he portrays the gallant bandit-narrator of "The Fantasticks" before a nightly capacity audience of 150.

Gaye, in her early 20s, is an old pro in television. She began as a child actress on the old Sid Caesar's Show of Shows and appeared in two soap operas before she joined Another World on NBC-TV.

"I now play a 19-year-old who is madly in love with a widower," said Gaye during a break in rehearsals of her role as Lee Randolph. "Previously, I was only playing kids. I was terrible as a girl with paralyzed legs in As The World Turns. Fortunately, that only lasted a month and then I went on to play a troubled kookie teen-ager in Secret Storm for three months."

Married last year to actor Morgan Paull, Gaye's best grownup part so far, she says was appearing with her husband in an Indiana summer stock staging of "Barefoot in the Park," the hit Broadway comedy.

"I didn't have to suffer once. I can hardly wait to do another part with Morgan," she says.

One of the pleasant aspects of soap operas, both Keith and Gaye admit, is that with a "little friendly pressure" one sometimes can convince his TV producer to have his part written out for a while so an actor can do other things.

Quiz Host Gives Off Opinions on Present Television

By JOHN DALY

EDITOR'S NOTE — John Charles Daly, in addition to his long-playing chores as host of "What's My Line?" is a veteran broadcast journalist and news executive. Here he sets down some opinions and observations of the television scene.

NEW YORK (AP) — I am exceedingly loath to join the host of television critics. But, as a long-time trend spotter, I cannot refrain from noting a new drift that is creeping insidously onto the airways.

It is a lenience designed to accommodate, or reflect, the new freedoms. It is opening the doors to a type of material that even a few years ago would have been consigned to the wastebasket in the office of continuity acceptance, TV's self-censors.

It starts with the voluptuary on the bearskin rug and will end heaven knows where. At present a large number of performers in one-minute commercials spend substantial time discussing the desirability and frequency of the most intimate personal relationship between the sexes. The remainder archly insist they were only referring to the product of the sponsor.

There are other examples, some of them too unprintable to print. Not many. But they are there, blue as the night club joke and suggestive as the perfume ads in the slick magazines. When the leer is fully commercialized, who can doubt that the direct statement is far behind. We have not yet arrived at the explicit on American television, but a beginning is being made and the theater has already demonstrated that from small four-letter words, big splotches of pure vulgarity grow.

I'm a nine-letter word man, myself. Tarnation, for instance, as in "What in tarnation goes on here?"

I have, in fact, been accused by some viewers, probably justifiably, of being addicted to the employment of the longish word, in the interest, it is alleged, of obscurity, confusion and obfuscation.

Recently, one set-side critic sent us scampering to the dictionary with the following acidulous suggestion: "If you are to persist in using multisyllabic words when short ones would serve just as well, if not better, why don't you go the whole way and have your name changed legally to Sesqui P. Daly?"

(Another editor's note — To save the reader a trip to the dictionary, that's a pun — "sesquipedalia" means "a very long word.")

"What's My Line?" will have color in September and the lighting engineers tell me I will have to discard the tow tie I have worn on the program for 10 years. In color, they say, the hole worn in the knot will show.

Finally, the television weather reporters—who, to paraphrase Churchill, have not always been wrong — have the latest technology working for them — radar, doppler systems, the Tiros satellite, and now the new stretch computer. But I have an acquaintance in the trade who has a sure thing he recommends to guide you for the summer months: "Just look out the window and if it isn't raining, go!"

"I liked it better on the TV Special in the comfort of my own living room!"

Hollywood News, Views

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Ever feel like chucking the old daily grind for other work you think you'd really like?

Anybody who hasn't?

Ed Ames! who made the switch, advises:

Must Give Thought

"You can't do it capriciously. But many a man must ask himself, 'Am I going to make a steady income and be miserable — or do what I really want to do and face up to the challenge of life?' "

Six years ago Ames was lead singer with the Ames Brothers quartet. For 10 years they'd toured the top night spots. Their record sales totaled 25 million. Ed, then 30, had an income of $100,000 a year, a wife, three children — and misery in his heart.

"It wasn't a good life," he says now. "We lived within four walls, never saw our wives and children. I felt my whole life was being frittered away, that I wasn't doing what God meant me to do.

Want Old Songs

"We varied our material as much as possible, but people always asked for the same old songs, like 'You, You, You' and 'The Naughty Lady of Shady Lane' " — two of the Ames brothers' big hits.

"When I broached it to my wife, she said, 'I know how miserable you've been. The best thing is to do what your instinct tells you. We were poor when we started. If necessary we'll start all over again.' "

The Ames brothers' last stand as a foursome was at Las Vegas' Sahara Hotel — at $12,500 a week. The three remaining brothers played out two years' bookings.

Gets Lump in Throat

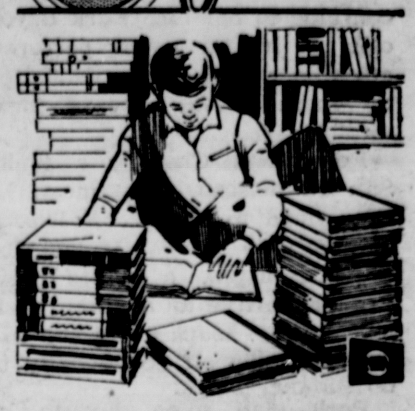

"I was interested in the theater," Ed says. "In a theater, even with nobody there, I get a lump in my throat."

Ed made it as an actor, starting at $40 a week off Broadway, after a year of job-hunting and drama study in which he got down to his last $200 savings.

Ed costars as Fess Parker' Indian pal Mingo on the "Daniel Boone" television series. With his TV salary, fairs, rodeos, concerts and occasional recordings like "Try to Remember," he says, his income is bigger than ever.

Patricia Morrow, who plays Rita Harrington Jacks on Peyton Place, is used to being recognized, but the strangest case of mistaken identity she has encountered came when a fan insisted she had seen Pat dancing on Hullabaloo.

The number of new books and new editions published for children has increased 400 per cent since 1925. Likewise, the total number of books published and sold has increased by more than 100 per cent. Studies show that voluntary reading by children increases through the primary and middle grades, reaching its peak in junior high school. Yet fewer high school students read books; in fact, fewer books than they read in earlier years.
